The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

Guaranteed LOWEST Down Prices in THE COUNTRY

"We go the distance for you."

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Celebrity Swap

Villages Decide Which Celebs Have To Move And Which Can Stay Put

By Dan Rattiner

Last week's meeting of the Hamptons Council was taken up almost entirely by a rancorous discussion of Celebrity Swap, the new law passed in February, which requires that each hamlet and village get its fair share of celebrities for the season. Some say the new law that requires celebrities to move might cause more problems than it solves. Others applauded the new law.

A discussion went on for nearly an hour, for example, between the councilman from Quogue, which has only a few celebrities, and the councilwoman from Water Mill, which has a lot of celebrities, about how many should have to move from one hamlet to the other. The communities have approximately the same population.

"We need to get BOTH Anne Bancroft and Mel Brooks," said the Quogue councilman.

"I can offer you ONE," the councilwoman replied. "These are Triple A celebrities. Each worth two of any other celebrities."

"You won't get just one of them to move," the Quogue councilman said. "They're married."

Many councilpeople were hanging out in the cloakroom where deals were being struck. Alec Baldwin would have to pack up and move from Amagansett to Bridgehampton.

"It's in the contract. Which one do you want?" the councilwoman said.

The Quogue councilman refused to be pinned down, and nothing was accomplished.

Many councilpeople were hanging out in the cloakroom where deals were being struck. Alec Baldwin would have to pack up and move from Amagansett to Bridgehampton. Edward Albee would be heading out of Montauk for Hampton Bays.

"I'll trade you three celebrities for Steven Spielberg," the Southampton councilman said to his counterpart in East Hampton.

Eventually, it was decided that certain celebrities should remain where they were as "anchors" for their towns. These included Marvin Hamlisch for Westhampton Beach, Peter Jennings in Bridgehampton, Kurt Vonnegut for Sagaponack, Martha Stewart for East Hampton, Kathleen Turner for Amagansett, Chuck Scarborough for Southampton, E. L. Doctorow for Sag Harbor, Isabella Rossellini for Bellport and Edward Albee for Montauk. A long debate took place about whether Jerry Seinfeld should be an anchor but it was decided that one public

TV Celebrity Chef

David Rosengarten

Cordially Invites You to

"Barbecue & Beyond"

The Hamptons' New Premiere Food Event

Come join TV celebrity chef David Rosengarten for a barbecue party unlike anything the Hamptons have ever seen!

It's called "Barbecue & Beyond," and it features three superstar New York City chefs serving up outrageously delicious barbecue.

As Chairman of the event, David will be surrounded by a "kitchen cabinet" of Union Square Cafe's legendary kitchen team, Michael Romano, Chef-Owner, and Dan Silverman, Executive Chef.

And what makes their participation so special?

- For an incredible six consecutive years, Union Square Cafe has been ranked New York's #1 restaurant by the Zagat Survey.
- Chef-Owner, Michael Romano, has won the James Beard Foundation's coveted honor, Best Chef in New York.

When you sample their culinary creations at this party, you'll know why these chefs are renowned as the best in New York.

Enjoy the Barbecue Magic of Blue Smoke!

You'll also sample extraordinary barbecue delights from Blue Smoke, New York's hot new barbecue sensation and Union Square Cafe's sister restaurant.

Together these superstar chefs will serve up a barbecue party unlike anything the Hamptons have ever tasted. Come join us!

appearance a year, which is what he averages, was not substantial enough. Another debate took place about Billy Joel but it was unclear where he would anchor, whether in North Haven, North Sea, Shelter Island or Noyack.

"He anchors in the harbor," someone finally said. And it was true and they moved on.

A survey was taken and it was determined that 12 celebrities live in Westhampton Beach, 3 in Quogue, 0 in Hampton Bays, 46 in Southampton, 10 in Water Mill, 31 in Bridgehampton, 28 in Sag Harbor, 22 in Sagaponack, 1 in Wainscott, 41 in East Hampton, 9 in Amagansett and 14 in Montauk.

After nearly two hours of debate, it was decided that 2 more would be shipped to Westhampton Beach, 5 to Quogue, 6 to Hampton Bays, 7 would come from Water Mill, 3 from Bridgehampton, 11 from East Hampton, 1 from Sag Harbor and 2 from Montauk. Who would have to move became the subject of the next two hours.

In the end, it was decided that Bud Schulberg would have to move to Hampton Bays, Paul Simon would be uprooted and replanted in Quogue and Cliff Robertson sent to Shinnecock. Also Puff Daddy Combs would be moving to Westhampton up by the airport, George Plimpton would go to Mecox and Roy Scheider and Barry Sonnenfeld would simply swap, the one moving to Amagansett, the other to Sagaponack. Allowed to remain where they are were Matthew Broderick, Lorne Michaels and Caroline Kennedy, even though a spokesperson for Ms. Kennedy said that she and her husband, Edwin Schlossberg, lived on a street with poor cell phone service and they would be willing to swap anytime. Also Sarah Jessica Parker, Ralph Lauren, Donna Karan, Bianca Jagger, Dennis Basso, Christie Brinkley, Bill Beutel, Lauren Bacall, Alan Alda, Chevy Chase, Lorne Michaels and Sting.

After the meeting, calls went out to dozens of brokerage houses to find the celebrities new places to live in their new locations. The search will begin tomorrow morning and all should be in place as finally agreed by Memorial Day weekend. •

Ferris Talmadge

The 20th Century

From Potatoes, Clams And Corn To Gucci, Polo And Cell Phones

By Dan Rattiner

I don't think people realize what stunning transformations the Hamptons have gone through in the past hundred years. It's kind of summed up in a slender book I have just read entitled THE SPRINGS IN THE OLD DAYS. It was written by a well-known and well-loved local resident named Ferris Talmadge in 1970. And the "old days" he refers to are those when he was a boy, which was between 1900 and 1920. Talmadge doesn't like the new days. Beginning around 1950, he says, the city people, mostly artists and writers from Manhattan, began to build vacation homes out east. And they had little or no regard for the land or the sea as they cleared the land and built frothy concoctions of "modern" architecture for their vacation homes that were almost immediately featured in the pages of the Architectural Digest. As Talmadge says, it takes a century to create just one inch of topsoil. These New Yorkers could bulldoze it off their homesites in less than an hour and often did. It was the beginning of the end.

In the sixties, the intellectual ferment in the Hamptons was all abubble. Broadway songwriter Cy Coleman had a house in East Hampton. Truman Capote lived in Sagaponack. Willem de Kooning had a studio in Springs. Over at Bobby Van's bar in Bridgehampton, the drinking and talking went on well into the night as authors Joe Heller and James Jones parried with editors George Plimpton and Willie Morris. A young playwright named Edward Albee had set up a workshop in Montauk. John Steinbeck and his wife bought a house in Sag Harbor.

But Ferris G. Talmadge had no interest in any of it. His interests were in the farming and the clamming and the incredible bounty of this area that made it possible for he and his wife, his family and his hundreds of friends and their families to eat what they grew and sell the rest. Here is what he wrote about Gardiner's Island.

"Gardiner's Island was from the beginning an ideal farm set-up," he wrote. "Here were grown all the necessities of life for those that lived there. Records taken from an old appraisal book now owned by Fannie Gardiner show corn, wheat, barley, oats, flax and tobacco. Many men from Springs went on Gardiner's Island yearly to wash and shear some 1,500 sheep owned by the Gardiners. This was done in the month of June. The sheep were driven into fresh water ponds, washed, dried and driven into barns, some of which still stand on the island. A good shearer could shear thirty-five or forty sheep a day, for which he was paid about ten cents each, which were good wages in those times.

"Each fleece was carefully folded outside in, tied with a special string and stored to await a favorable market. These fleeces were kept dry and finally hauled to Sag Harbor."

Ferris Talmadge was local born and raised, went to the Springs School, then to apprentice on a farm in Riverhead.

"The best school there was," wrote Peter Clark in the introduction to this book.

And in grammar school around the turn of the century, the game of baseball came to the Springs.

"Before that we amused ourselves by playing 'Tally-Ho,' which was throwing a rubber ball over the roof of the school," Talmadge wrote.

As a teenager, Talmadge was a star pitcher on one of the local teams.

"There was a baseball team composed mostly of Millers back in the early 1900s," he wrote. "Horace, Ben, Sam, Florus, George S. Vernon and Willis, all Millers and all good throwers and good hitters. They played in back of Stanley Talmadge's house and drew good crowds. Les Quin used to pitch, and he was good."

Talmadge wrote about baseball players who had learned the game before that.

"Mr. Nat Miller of the Springs used to play baseball in the 1880s. That was before they used masks or chest protectors. He told me he caught many a game using only a piece of beef tied to his left hand. Those days were before A. G. Spalding made gloves and mitts."

Today, up in Springs, there is a big barn and blacksmith shop restored as a museum. This is how Ferris Talmadge described the goings on in that building.

"Mr. Charles Parsons, brother of Frank, Hale and Dan, all of whom grew up at the Fireplace homestead, was a man some of you remember as a 'natural' blacksmith. He could do excellent work in either wood or iron, weld it or splice it. As a boy I used to help him hold a light or help him hold onto a piece of iron for a splice or a cut. In the days of the first automobiles and motor boats, when parts were hard to get, he would make the necessary tools to make the repair parts, and few of them 'let go.'

"He had many unpaid accounts at his death, and all the people of the town owed him a fortune for keeping them going in the days when the going was tough. (Talmadge is referring to the Great Depression — Dan). Very few men I ever knew were his equal, either as a person or a mechanic."

Talmadge opened a sawmill after the Hurricane of 1938 decimated the pine swamp area of Northwest, getting the contract to cut up the fallen timber from that storm. In his later years he became a founding member of the Preservation Society of the East End. He also went to Washington one year where he had an audience with the Secretary of Agriculture about the needs of the local farmers. At the time he wrote this book he was blind and near the end of his life.

One of the main attractions in the 1960s and 1970s here in the Hamptons, for the New Yorkers who summered here, anyway, was the great abundance of food available for the catching and the picking. The intellectuals of that era were great cooks. And what could be better than to go out at the beginning of the day to catch or buy fresh fish and clams, pick strawberries right off the plants, get fresh corn and asparagus and fresh baked bread and pies, and have a few friends over. The abundance of the Hamptons, due to

Dan's Papers Announces Plan To Enter The Laundry Clothesline Wash Drying Business

By Dan Rattiner

Southampton passed a law last week that strikes at the very heart of what this place is all about. The law makes it illegal for a homeowner in a residential district to dry his wash on a line in his front yard. There will be no more clothespins, no more smell of fresh laundry, no more shirts and dresses flapping in the breeze.

"Clothes put moisture in the air. They don't use fossil fuel and they get people outside," said Elizabeth Haderer of Hampton Bays just before the vote. The law, presented by Supervisor Heaney, passed by a vote of 4 to 0.

What impelled the discussion and passage of this law was pressure from the real estate interests that clothes on clotheslines adversely affects real estate values. The Hamptons are now a handsome, beautifully groomed, clipped, pruned and mowed well-to-do resort. The normal activities of ordinary people, not a problem just a few years ago, are offensive to some now. Soon there will be laws making it illegal to park a pickup truck with fishing gear in your driveway. There will be laws saying you can wash your car on your front lawn, but you can't change the oil in your car on your front lawn. Soon, people who dress slovenly will be picked up by the police, made-over by fancy stores and re-deposited on front lawns in clothes that are in the latest fashion, that fit properly and are all pressed and tucked in and cleaned, presumably in the washers and dryers that everyone will be forced to buy so residents won't be putting up the dreaded clotheslines. Surveys made in our county indicate that about one in five families does not have a washer or dryer.

We are not far from laws that single out people such as Aunt Harriet... from setting foot outside a Southampton home for fear of offending the neighbors.

We are not far from laws that single out people such as Aunt Harriet, a fat slob who is pug-ugly and loud, from setting foot outside a Southampton home for fear of offending the neighbors. (Though maybe that is not a bad idea.) We are not far from laws saying it is okay to own a Mercedes but not a Taurus.

Southampton Town has passed this new clothesline law based on the section of the codebook that regulates fences and walls. But fences and walls are semi-permanent structures. A clothesline, which is taken up and taken down, is not. I am not so sure about the constitutionality of this law.

I am also not so sure what constitutes a front yard and a back yard. This was the topic of much discussion at the Town Board meeting. For example, is the front yard of an oceanfront mansion the lawn that faces the sea? Or the lawn that faces the road? One could easily get in a legal argument with a lawyer, representing a resident, who claims the pond in his back yard is actually what he considers his front yard. Exactly how big does a body of water have to be before it takes over and becomes the legal "front" yard of a residence? And why should someone who can afford to have a waterfront manse get entitled to this definitional discussion while the rest of the populace does not? Has it come to that?

In any case, Dan's Papers is going into the wash-on-the-line business. We are not in a residential zone. We are zoned office business, and so here on the Montauk Highway we can put up clotheslines wherever we want. And so, for those people who like the smell and feel of sun-dried clothes, we offer a new service. Bring your wet wash to Dan's Papers' Luxury Clothes Drying Division. $10 a laundry basket full. Open nine to five, Monday to Friday. Trained drying technicians will hang your laundry on the line on our property for however long is necessary, through rain and snow and sleet and storm if need be, until what you have given us is squeaky-clean and dry as a bone. At that point, don't call us, we'll call you. You can come by and pick your stuff up, all neatly folded, just like at home. We take all credit cards. Or you can arrange delivery for a small extra charge.

Right now we're in the making up of the bill form stage, the putting up of the sign stage and the buying up of the clothespins and clotheslines stage, but we expect the surveyors in tomorrow to determine the best location for the lines and our sign should go up and we should open our doors to all comers shortly. Look for our grand opening banners and balloons and the colorful pennants strung about the property to announce it. You say we can't put up grand opening pennants, officer?

CAN THEY MAKE YOU MOW YOUR LAWN?

A friend of mine told me this bitter story of his youth. He had this father who didn't believe in mowing the lawn. If God had meant our lawns to be short he would have given us grass that only grew short, he often said. My friend was nine years old. Having a father who took this position was a great embarrassment to him. His nine-year old friends would come over and walk through the tall grass and tease him.

One day, a group of neighbors showed up, all serious-like, and they came in and sat on the living room sofas to have a little talk with my friend's father. There was no law that said he had to mow his lawn. But everybody else mowed their lawn. His property, they said, was a blight on the community, a cankersore in the middle of neighbors proud of how the community looked. Would he mow the lawn?

Yes, he would now mow the lawn, he said. He led them out to his garage where he had a rusty old manual lawnmower which he took out and, in front of all these people, pushed to his front yard and mowed the letters of a curseword in his lawn.

There, he said.

In silence, the neighbors left. And they never returned. My friend made weekly trips to the psychiatrist for years after that experience. •

An Embarrassing Story From San Francisco That Never Made It To New York

By Dan Rattiner

"You must have heard about the dog trial we had here," my daughter Maya said. "What did you think of it?"

We are sitting, Maya and I, at the kitchen table drinking coffee, the hills of San Francisco visible under the sunshine out her window. She lives here. I am visiting from East Hampton. She seems embarrassed to have asked me this question.

"Pretty straightforward," I said. "A woman's dog attacks and kills a young woman, a yuppie jogger, in the hallway of an apartment house in a well-to-do part of town. The owner's in court trying to blame it on the woman her dog killed. She's an idiot. They should put her in jail for life. And her lawyer should be disbarred."

She got ten to fifteen years. At one point, her lawyer got down on her hands and knees and barked to show how the woman he killed provoked him.

"You didn't hear all the details?"

That I did not hear the details is a testament to how local events lose their details, and sometimes their meaning, as they travel long distances. I would be embarrassed indeed for San Francisco if I had been informed of these oh-so-shabby details.

The pitbull did not belong to the woman who had let him out into the hall. He belonged to a man in state prison, sentenced for an assault, who had asked if the woman and her husband would take care of his pit bull. The woman and her husband knew the man in prison quite well. Though he is only five years younger than the couple, they had recently, legally adopted him. What was really strange, though, was that nude photographs of the woman had been found at the man's house. And he had been a neo-Nazi, a member of a local cell.

The lawyer for the prosecution asked the woman and her husband, who was also on trial, how they could have associated with someone like this. They were, after all, Jews.

"We didn't bother him about his personal life," the woman said.

He had the bite marks. But... the marks on the butt had been caused by an elevator door closing too fast on him.

As for the nude pictures, they were mentioned, but did not seem to fit into anything. It was also brought up that there were pictures of all these people having sex with the pit bull but that never got into the courtroom. The judge gaveled everyone into silence about it before it could be presented.

The essence of the defense's case was that the woman who their dog killed in the hallway was a bad person. She lived with another woman, who was her lover. She wore a perfume that she knew would drive the dog crazy. It had some female hormone thing in it. And if she was afraid of the dog, as her butch businesswoman lover said she was, how come she never complained to the landlord?

It was revealed at the trial that in the past this dog had bitten quite a number of people in the apartment building. All had complained to the landlord who had done nothing about it. The various bites were documented and brought into the courtroom, the victims' testimony duly recorded. One of them, the woman's lawyer said, was not really bitten. He claimed to have been bitten on the butt. He had the bite marks. But what happened, it had turned out, or so said the woman's lawyer, was that the marks on the butt had been caused by an elevator door closing too fast on him.

San Francisco is a strange place. But so is our home. Here on Long Island there was the story of a man who was so fat the court decided he could no longer be afforded visitation rights to see his own children. He'd have to slim down.

"Never heard of that one," Maya said. She seemed relieved.

The stories travel from town to town, the details fading the farther away you get from where they have taken place. In the end, you just don't know WHAT is real. •

To The Sky

If You Go Up High Enough In The Hamptons, You Get A View Of The Ocean

By Dan Rattiner

One of the perks of being really, really rich, as you know, is having a house in the Hamptons. South of the Highway in the Hamptons. North of the Highway you can find houses for sale for as little as a million dollars. South of the Highway it's a whole different matter.

If you can't afford a house South of the Highway, one of your other options is to buy an acre of land, a building site, and construct your own house on it. This makes a lot of sense to people, because house construction is house construction and unless you use marble, you're likely to spend as much per square foot on the South of the Highway as on the North.

Another point favoring South of the Highway is that you are near the ocean. You can get a view of the ocean, if you can get high enough. And a cubic yard of fill delivered South of the Highway costs the same as a cubic yard of fill North of the Highway. Furthermore, there seem to be no laws against building a high platform so you can get a good look. The rule is however that the amount of fill you plan to use must be filed with the Department of Environmental Conservation and however high your platform then gets is what your "grade" is. Above that, in residential construction, you are allowed to go up from the grade to the roof a total of 32 feet.

Whether allowing people to build platforms upon which to build their houses is a good thing or a bad thing is certainly a debatable matter. On the one hand, there are laws against building berms — piles of earth up high, usually at the outer reaches of the property to prevent neighbors from bothering you — because building a berm is certainly going to bother your neighbor. On the other hand, although a platform logically is a four sided berm that has been filled in, the costs of properties South of the Highway are so high that only those that attain the rank of "Master of the Universe" can afford them. And there is a long tradition, in Egypt and in the Mayan civilization, of Masters of the Universe, almost Gods, building ziggurats and pyramids up toward the heavens to be closer to the deities. Or, looking in another direction, getting a view of the ocean.

And there is a long tradition, in Egypt and in the Mayan civilization, of... building ziggurats and pyramids up toward the heavens to be closer to the deities.

Which leads us to the building site of Andrew Saunders at 312 Jobs Lane, Bridgehampton, very very South of the Highway, who has constructed, prior to getting his home built, a platform of such vast proportions that he has gotten his neighbors up in arms. On several sides, it rises up well over seven feet. And all together, I suspect, it has required the services of trucks bringing in more than eight thousand yards of fill, something that probably cost him upwards of a hundred thousand dollars. Probably a day's work for someone in the tax bracket that could afford this parcel. And more than enough to exceed the amount allowed by the D. E. C. which came out last Friday and offered to shut the project down.

The real problem, I think, as is true with another parcel known as the Rennert parcel in Sagaponack, is a matter of scale. Here on Jobs Lane, the parcels are only one and one and a half acre in size. And most of the parcels have homes on them. Building a platform of this height allows whoever constructs a house on top of it to peer into the windows of all the houses around it — in addition of course to peering at the ocean and cavorting with the deities — while all the houses around it get to peer at the sides of the base of the platform. This is not going down well in the neighborhood.

I drove out onto the site last Tuesday. That is to say, I put my SUV into four wheel drive and went up the ramp to the top of the platform to look around. There was no construction going on at the time I was there, because quite possibly the paperwork to shut the project down has gone through. What I found was that in spite of all efforts, the platform has not, at least not yet, been built high enough to afford the hoped-for view of the ocean. Secondly, there is the matter of wetlands. A sign at the entrance to the dirt road running up to the platform says that Mr. Saunders has gotten all the permissions necessary to build an 8,050 square foot house, also a swimming pool, a tennis court, a porch, a garage and various other structures closer to the wetlands than the law allows. (The law says you have to be farther away than 173 feet.) But my observation is that the property ITSELF is, or was, wetlands. If you climb down the berm on one unbuilt side of the platform, you are in tall reeds and soft, squishy earth that sucks at your shoes when you try to walk in it. One neighbor, Randy Marder, who has lived there ten years, says the property flooded regularly. He calls it The Moat. It is The Moat, he says, because the platform stays dry when it rains but the property around it floods. He has pictures of it flooding around the platform. The floods go onto the neighbor's property.

The Southampton Town Building Department, which is responsible for allowing this project, says that Mr. Saunders has gotten approvals to put a platform up there using up to three thousand feet of fill (worth about $40,000). They say they were to the site last week and from what they can see it is below that. They say he also has all his other permits in order. On the other hand, this is the same Building Department that looked at plans for a 106,000 square foot home for Ira Rennert, noted that there were no limits on the size of a private home allowed to be built and stamped it approved. That was four years ago and the con-

Learn It, Earn It

Southampton Educator Creates A Program To Give Free Computers To Everyone

By Jerry Cimisi

Long time educator, Ken Komoski of Southampton looked at a few pertinent facts, noticed something extraordinary about them and decided to do something about it. The first fact was that computer skills are absolutely necessary in the contemporary workplace. The second was that there were individuals or families that could not afford computers. The third was that American industry, in periodic systems upgrades, now annually disposes of an estimated 20 million computers a year.

So Komoski decided to bring those discarded and still very serviceable computers into households. He said, "We have a digital divide in this country. Computers in schools are just window dressing. There is not enough time in school to thoroughly learn the use of computers. Kids who really know computers usually have them at home. I wanted to create an environment that freed up the inherent resources of kids as well adults. We are learning beings. We thwart ourselves by not creating opportunities for education."

Komoski founded LINCT (Learning and Information Networking for Community via Technology). The idea was simple. "I would get businesses to donate computers they were about to get rid of and get them to persons or families who could make good use of them but for the moment could not afford them," Komoski said.

But there would be a big, intermediate step, Komoski would not simply hand out the computers, but set up an intensive course in computer use that would be required to get a computer. The motto was, "When you learn it, you earn it."

This was not a simple three hour course in how to type text on Microsft Word, but a twelve week, four or five hour a day instruction period during which students would learn all the essential intricacies of computer use, including trouble shooting. The course is free.

> Komoski would not simply hand out the computers, but set up an intensive course in computer use that would be required to get a computer. The motto was, "When you learn it, you earn it."

Komoski said, "LINCT is an outgrowth of programs I had started in the past." In 1962, at Columbia University, Komoski founded the Institute for Educational Technology – which made the radical proposal to use computers and TV in education. "All this was prior to Sesame Street," added Komoski.

In 1967, again at Columbia, Komoski was heading EPIE (Educational Products Information Exchange. "This was to get a consumer evaluating agency for learning products and resources in schools."

EPIE is till in existence and is not restricted to New York City. It is from an EPIE office in Hampton Bays out of which the LINCT program is run.

Komoski grew up in New Jersey and began a teaching career there. "I've taught Latin, algebra and biology. I became a teacher because, at 16, I read H.G. Wells' The Outline of History. I felt that the world was in a race between education and catastrophe. So I had to be a teacher rather than a catastrophe maker." Komoski remarked that most people seem to be simply bystanders, which certainly doesn't help matters any.

Komiski later moved to New York. He first came to the Hamptons in 1960 as a renter, then bought a home at Flying Point in Southampton in 1978.

He began LINCT in 1994. "In 1993 I had read that American industry was discarding 15 million computers a year. Now it's twenty million a year." Komiski pointed out that a recycling of any portion of these computers has its positive, environmental aspect. One of the major causes of toxicity in the environment around the World Trade Center was that of computers – specifically, the monitors.

"You can't just put a computer in a landfill,' said Komoski. "They have to be taken apart. The metals and plastics can be recycled, but not the monitors, which contain mercury."

Referring to LINCT, Komiski said, "Our costs are so low compared to that of other agencies who train computing."

There have been LINCT training sites throughout Suffolk County. On the East End there are LINCT classes in Hampton Bays, East Moriches, Greenport and Bridgehampton. "We get donated space," Komoski said. "Churches, community centers, schools. Peter Jennings has been a big promoter of the classes at the Bridgehampton Childcare Center. We get a little bit of funding, $60,000 a year from the county." Other LINCT programs may recieve some funds from local townships.

Most recently there was a class at the Brookhaven National Laboratory. The instructors in that class were scientists, engineers and office people from the lab who volunteered their time. The majority of instructors at other sites are people who have gone through the program themselves.

Peggie Kelly, who oversees the LINCT program in Hampton Bays, took the course when she was let go from a longtime job. A friend told her about the program. "I thought it would be my ticket to getting a better job," she said.

Over the course of the class, Ms. Kelly became so proficient that she soon was helping other students. At the end of the class she was asked to be an assistant teacher. She eventually became a full time teacher at LINCT classes. "I've taught people from homeless shelters. I find that for the most part people that you teach are so appreciative. She taught about a year, then become a manager at LINCT.

"We have what we call three learning cycles a year," she said. "We give out about 400 computers at each cycle."

When Komoski began LINCT in 1994, LILCO was the first company to donate computers. "We got them from the IRS in Holtsville, the Suffolk County administration and the bankruptcy court in Westbury." LINCT's premiere donor has been British Petroleum, which has donated 31,000 computers. Other donors to LINCT have been Newsday and the U.N.

"We started the program with no money and four volunteers from Peconic Bay Quakers, who had a worship group on the North Fork. Komoski is a Quaker.

The success of the program is not evident in Suffolk County alone. Komoski said there are LINCT programs in Chicago, Los Angeles, Oakland, Phoenix, Washington, D.C. and Atlanta,

Wally Smith

General Manager WPBX Radio

By Susan W. Simm

While there are those among us that search a lifetime for their calling, others are just plain lucky enough to do what they were born to do right from the start. Of course, being in the right place at the right time doesn't hurt, either.

Just as he was finishing his graduate studies at the University of Southern California in 1971, Wally Smith was asked to manage the radio station on campus, KUSC. These were the days of community-owned television stations, but the licenses for most non-commercial, educational radio stations were held by universities. So when Congress decided to create a national public broadcasting system, with both TV and radio service, the search began for college radio stations that wanted to be a part of this new thing called "Public Radio." Talk about being at the right place at the right time.

"The station at USC, a classical music station, was being run by 18-year-olds who were on the air 24 hours a day," said Smith during a recent interview. "I knew them all because we had been students together and, when they decided to ask the university to professionalize the station and become the Los Angeles anchor for the newly-formed National Public Radio system (NPR), the question came up of who would run it. I was teaching at the time and, when they put out a call for a station manager, a typical crowd of people applied.

"After the students reviewed these – remember, this was a time, the late 60s and early 70s, when students were kings – they said, 'Nothing doing. We want you to ask Wally Smith to become manager of the station.' The administration said, 'Well, he hasn't applied for the job,' and the students said, 'That's your problem, not ours. He's the best candidate.' So I accepted the job I hadn't applied for for the MASSIVE salary of $13,000 a year and demanded four weeks vacation. I never took one day of it in twenty-six years."

Wally Smith is not afraid to speak out on issues, something he does with both passion and eloquence, that some might shy away from for fear of creating controversy. USC is located in the heart of South Central L.A., protected on one side by the Coliseum and on the other by a large park, but three of its borders are literally on the edge of the neighborhood called Watts. Smith's years in L.A. brought him awareness of the importance of tolerance as well as a powerful realization that the status quo often needs to be questioned. This became particularly apparent during the riots in the early 90s. In fact, Rodney King was beaten not far from the campus.

"During the riots, most of the buildings around us were burned to the ground and the university became the staging ground for the National Guard. We kept people informed of what was happening but mostly we provided an oasis away from the smoke and the flames. But the most interesting thing about it all was, while the radio station pumped out Beethoven and Mozart as everything around us burned, the students and the administration — trying to put the best face on the situation — said that the university was 'untouched' by the riots, which was true. Not only was it physically untouched by the riots, but not much happened to the psyche of the university, either."

The final quarter of the last century in the United States, as all of us who came of age during it know, was not only war-torn in the aftermath of the turbulent 60s but would also witness pivotal changes in terms of cultural and ethnic diversity. And while the riots failed to impact the university's outlook, the population shift in L.A. certainly would. Smith cites this shift as the most significant event to affect the radio station during his tenure.

"There was a dramatic shift away from a white, Anglo-Saxon dominated culture toward a culture dominated by Mexicans, Central and South Americans and Asians. The demographic shift in L.A. was just huge and it happened almost overnight. Today, the minority populations of the city represent the majority population. These changes had an enormous impact on how I approached the radio station and I felt that, if we were going to preserve the culture of Western Europe, then we needed to open up and invite these other cultures into our experience. We could no longer stonewall them and pretend that they weren't the dominant force in our community."

As a classical music station, Smith felt that they were well-positioned to introduce some new opportunities to that non-European audience. Though not initially well-received by the traditional audience, this broke new ground with non-traditional audiences.

"People began to say things like, 'Gee, I never knew I'd be allowed to listen to classical music. I always thought that I had to be a scholar.' As a result, the station's audience became younger and more hip, the next generation to listen to classical music. When there is such a dramatic shift in the power base in the culture of a community, you can't ignore that and survive as a radio station."

"People began to say things like, gee, I never knew I'd be allowed to listen to classical music. I always thought that I had to be a scholar."

Wally Smith was born in rural western Pennsylvania. As a young boy, he used to play "radio announcer" in his attic bedroom with his 45 RPM record player, an early indication of his future career. The first person in his family to go to college, Smith still feels lucky that he had opportunities others lacked.

"I was part of that break-away generation. If I had not been a candidate for the ministry, I might have ended up a manager at the local W.T. Grant & Co. because that was the fate of people in my class." After studying at a small Presbyterian college, Smith attended – through the generosity of family and friends – Western Theological Seminary, which Smith describes as "very, very liberal."

Then, in 1960, after participating an international religious broadcaster's conference at USC, Smith decided to return and study broadcasting there.

"Three years later, I packed everything I owned into a Dodge Dart convertible, left Pennsylvania and headed to school in southern California." Eight years and two degrees later, Smith would be offered the job of managing the university's radio station, KUSC, a post he would hold until 1997.

Twenty-six years at the same job could constitute a career in itself. But Smith was too young to retire and wanted a new challenge.

"I reached a point where the university wanted the station to do something different. After years of support from the administration, a new president came in who was not terribly enthusiastic about the radio station or about what I was doing there. Subsequently, they homogenized the station – and it is doing very well," Smith hastens to add, "but it is essentially wallpaper music. Though successful, it is completely opposite of what I feel public broadcasting should be. I believe that we had a wonderful opportunity to integrate the community into the radio station. The truth – and this is something that usually gets me in deep trouble – is that what we were seeing in L.A. was the front edge of the end of the dominance of Western European culture in American society, a trend now becoming much more nation-wide than many people are willing to admit."

When Smith joined KUSC back in 1971, the radio station had no measurable audience, a transmitter below sea-level that barely reached beyond the edge of the campus, and an annual budget of $4000. By 1997, it was the national producer of shows like Marketplace, had a budget of $6,000,000 and had become the first radio station in the NPR system to have over half a million listeners.

"All this happened during those twenty-six

NEW YORK'S MOST CELEBRATED SYNAGOGUE

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 199

But what if.....

Years ago, I recall sitting in a college classroom listening to the professor who was being interrupted every five minutes by a guy in the back corner of the room who kept asking, "But what if...." followed by some bizarre extremely remote possibility. The professor had to waste lecture time acknowledging that, yes, anything can happen, but let's try to think within viable parameters.

One afternoon, while sitting in the classroom, too tired to care, I heard that idiot start up again with his, "Yea, but what if..." He snapped my last nerve and in front of the whole class and teacher I shouted, "But what if you just shut up and let us hear the G—damn lecture!" I'm not sure if the teacher rebuked me for my outburst because the class was applauding.

Everyone has endured these "But what if..." people in a class, in a meeting, or in any kind of gathering where information is being discussed or imparted. They drive you nuts.

Like many people I have watched the TV specials about how the Twin Towers were constructed and how the impact of two jumbo jets loaded with tons of jet fuel brought them down. When they were constructed, the architects, engineers and builders factored in compensatory measures for all the natural and man-made disasters they could reasonably and remotely anticipate; fire, flood, mild earthquake, super hurricane, pounding nor 'easter. They even factored in how the towers could absorb the impact of a small jet plane, a DC-10 I think.

Recently, some studies have come out criticizing the builders of the Twin Towers, saying specifically, that if they had welded all the beams together instead of bolting them the towers would have stayed up longer and more people would have been saved. There were some other specifics I can't recall, but the study tries to fix blame on the towers' builders for many of the 9/11 deaths.

What a crock!

When the architects, engineers and builders were in meeting after meeting discussing how they would create these incredible structures, I guarantee that the "But what if..." people were there in strength. Here's a transcript I found from one of those meetings:

Bill: "Joe, what did the physics guy say about how far the Towers will sway in a Grade 5 hurricane?"

Joe: "He says the tops will sway 23.5 inches in 200 mph winds."

Bill: "Geez, that much huh? Damn. We'll have to get the structural team for the top 20 floors on that right away and..."

Norman: "But what if the hurricane spawns a tornado and they both hit at the same time?"

Bill: "Those are two different kinds of weather systems, Norm. You wouldn't have a hurricane and tornado at the same time."

Joe: "We'll be threading cable through the critical structure points to withstand a 5 point earthquake and I thought if we..."

Norman: "But what if we have another ice age? What if a glacier pushes the Towers off their foundations?"

Bill: "Okay, Norman, well, glaciers move slowly. Probably we'd have time to work something out, right, Joe?"

Joe: "Absolutely, we'd all have time to pack summer clothes because a million ton glacier is going to push our asses all the way to Brazil."

Bill: "Let's just try to focus on what could realistically happen, okay, Norm?"

Norman: "Okay... but what if the Towers get hit by a airplane?"

Bill: "We've covered that contingency, Norm. The Towers can take the impact of a DC 10 without collapsing."

Norman: "Yea, but what if, 25 years from now, the jets are bigger, and what if terrorists from foreign countries come over here and hijack two of these giant jets full of highly explosive jet fuel and crash into the towers... huh? What about that?"

Bill: "Joe, you wanna field that question?"

Joe: "Can't help ya."

Bill: "Why not?"

Joe: "I'm trying to stay ahead of Norman. I'm working out structural impact to the Towers in the event the city is attacked by Godzilla."

As Smith became disenchanted with what was happening at KUSC, he learned from a colleague that there was an opening at WPBX, a small radio station located on Long Island University's Southampton campus. He couldn't understand why, with its location in one of the most interesting communities in the United States, it had never developed into a major Public Radio station.

"My colleagues kept asking, 'How can we get some alternative programming into New York City?' because WNYC was the only Public Radio station in the area. No one wanted anything to do with this little radio station out east on Long Island. So I came out here and was offered the job." Without applying for it, of course.

When Smith arrived at work, he found a nice, community station – "a kind of club" – that was making almost no impact beyond the community.

"When you have a broadcast property as valuable as this one, you have an obligation to serve a greater volume of people and that wasn't the motive of the people running the station at the time." The university, marginally involved prior to Smith's arrival, wanted to do more.

"David Steinberg (president of Long Island University) wants me to create the L.I.U. Public Radio Network so that we can figure out how to get broadcast service from Brooklyn to Montauk. David wants WPBX to bring prestige to the university much as KUSC did for USC." When Smith began, the station was barely known in East Hampton.

"You'd think that Southampton was in Boston and East Hampton was in California." Oh yes. Especially in August.

The most dramatic change at WPBX under Smith's watch, in addition to the creation of a state-of-the-art broadcasting studio, was the shift from a primarily classical to all-jazz format. Despite what many people unfamiliar with the station think, this was a decision made before Smith's arrival, though he certainly applauds the change and has greatly facilitated the transition.

"The jazz format came because, before I got here, there had been a number of surveys conducted to determine how well the various styles of music were serving the public. As it turned out, there are more classical music radio stations available to people on eastern Long Island than there are

"About 5,000 kids from the South Side of Chicago were taught. In those situations, kids from a poor neighborhood, the motivation can be even stronger, because most of what the kids experience is so unsatisfying in terms of really knowing and doing things for themselves. That's what the whole thing is about, motivation."

Komoski talked about kids learning the mechanics of computers: how they work, taking them apart, etc. "So few kids have much experience in things like this now. When I was growing up. Everyone was taking cars and radios apart. Now, especially when cars have gotten more complex.... With kids today it's more 'Plug In and Play' than 'Engage and Learn.'"

And Komoski talked about the reservoir of adults. "We have used the Digital Divide to obscure the Earning Divide. The latest reports from the Department of Commerce show this divide is widening."

Komoski said that of the adults who take LINCT programs, 95 percent are single mothers. "It's a way for them to climb a little higher in the system. And just going through the thorough process of learning the computer does more for a person that gaining that one accomplishment. People have told me that not only did they get a better job through LINCT, but that they are confident in other things they decide to tackle. Like I said, it's all about motivation." •

Lizzie News

By Dan Rattiner

According to the New York Daily News, which wrote an exclusive about the Lizzie Grubman case, the Lizzie Grubman case may be settled in a deal which will spare Lizzie from going to jail. Grubman has been charged with leaving the scene of an accident, 24 assault charges and a DWI charge after she allegedly cursed at a parking lot attendant, put her daddy's Mercedes SUV in reverse, and mowed down about two dozen people who were waiting in line to get into Southampton's Conscience Point Inn for a little drinking and dancing last August.

The News reports that Suffolk County Court Judge John Mullin is considering this deal which would involve Lizzie having five years' probation, 500 hours of community service and a fine of $700,000 in restitution, pleading guilty to leaving the scene of the accident, with the assault and DWI charges dropped and no jail time.

However, the judge has not yet made a decision and is reported to be very nervous about doing this deal fearful there would be a backlash if he agrees to this proposal. It should all come out in the wash at the next hearing on May 13.

Grace's Hots Closes To Become A Bank

By Dan Rattiner

Grace's Hot Dogs, the restaurant in Manorville that has been a favorite stopping point for Hamptonites for 31 years, closed its doors last week, the property sold to the North Fork Bank for $1.3 million, which plans to put a branch of the bank there. Grace Amond and her husband Harry are looking forward to their retirement.

Devotees of Grace's Hots, however, will not have to look far to find the restaurant again, if plans by Grace's daughter go ahead. Eva Haghie and her husband have bought property across the street and a little down the road from the old Grace's and hope to be open next year with, you guessed it, Grace's Hots.

Now remember, you put money in on the left, you eat the hot dog on the right. Don't get them mixed up.

its combination of latitude, weather and the working ethic of such people as Ferris Talmadge, inspired the likes of food writers Craig Claiborne and Pierre Franey, and the restaurateur Henri Soule, formerly of Manhattan, who opened the legendary Villa D' Or Restaurant in the summertime on Montauk Highway at the head of Georgica Pond in Wainscott.

Today, the intellectuals are still here and there are pockets of local people still tilling the land, but the whole focus of this community has been taken over by multimillionaires in the film, entertainment, broadcast, advertising and financial worlds. The action, not much different from what goes on in Beverly Hills or Palm Beach or the skyscrapers of Manhattan, takes place over dinner at Nick and Toni's in East Hampton and half a dozen other similar dining establishments. Businesses are bought and sold, deals done and media empires assembled and disassembled.

Today, the food served likely as not comes from Zabar's or Citarella or Jerry Della Femina's Red Horse Market and it is brought in, fresh every morning from the city, by big trucks that jam Sunrise Highway. Or it comes by helicopter or by airplane from some faraway place, a faraway place known for making whatever it makes as the very best in the world, you may be sure, to be sold here for a pretty penny.

People have cell phones and palm pilots and Mercedes convertibles and polo ponies and their idea of a good time is to stand around under a tent on the lawn of a private estate drinking wine and holding light conversation about such things as whether Jerry Seinfeld can be persuaded to lend his name to the next fundraiser. The days of the unusual and remarkable harvest abundance of the East End seem far, far away.

"Just east of the Springs chapel, over the bridge," Talmadge wrote, "stands Dan Miller's store, the history of which dates back 175 years to Colonel Parsons. Charles K. Smith owned and operated this store from about 1880 to 1915, Tony Fields owned it a short time and now Daniel T. Miller owns it. Here, for generations, national history and local gossip have been debated. As far back as I can remember, it was a common meeting-ground for all of Springs' local characters, who stayed well along into the late evening hours. The happenings of the world were aired and argued. Every incident of any consequence was edited in great detail. There was no local daily paper, but none was needed. The sick and injured were visited, and the destitute helped."

So many changes. And all in just 100 years. Think what might happen in the next twenty. Stick around. • in New York City, Boston or San Francisco. Also, we had an ancient library of recordings. We just couldn't compete. Next, it was revealed that not only was there no jazz on Public Radio out here, there was no jazz at all! Today, not only is there great support for WPBX from our local communities, but from southern Connecticut as well."

Prior to this switch – which occurred in 1999 – a confusing controversy brewed between L.I.U. and Sacred Heart University in Connecticut. It was based on a dispute about whether WPBX should be allowed to move its frequency to 88.3 FM and increase its power. Smith sets the record straight.

"There were some extremely ugly politics surrounding this issue, but in the end, everybody benefited. Connecticut Public Radio got our old channel, 91.3 FM, WSHU got permission to build a group of transmitters across the island giving them a second service here, and we got 25,000 watts of power. Everybody ended up okay, but it was a long, bitter and expensive fight between the two colleges." All this happened long before Smith's arrival in 1997.

The first time I met Wally Smith, I was a volunteer answering calls during a fund drive in the old basement studio in an administrative building that WPBX used to call home. Though perhaps state-of-the-art in 1970, this dark, gloomy space looked more like an old high school language lab than a radio studio. Part of David Steinberg's plan to showcase L.I.U, now a reality, was to build a broadcasting studio that would make WPBX the focal point of Chancellor's Hall, a new building on the Southampton campus. The administration also wanted a place to bring prospective students and benefactors as well as provide a resource for enrolled students. The new space, especially by comparison with the old, is spectacular.

"When I got here, the studio hadn't been built yet so I had an opportunity to lend my input," said Smith. "It is completely digital, and yet anyone with basic computer skills can learn programming here. The college deserves a lot of credit for making such a major investment in this facility."

On a tour of the studio last December, I noticed that there were very few places for on-the-air broadcasters to sit. Had the seats not arrived yet?

"I think that it develops more energy, and improves performance, if people are standing. They've been sitting until now, sitting kind of frumped up (Smith does a hilarious imitation of a "frumped up" broadcaster), but that's because, until now, there hasn't been enough room for them to stand. I even put the CD players on the other side of the room so that they have to walk over to change them." He registers concern on my face. "Of course," he says, "they'll have stools. I might even put in cots in case they need to lie down," he adds jokingly. They may need them by the end of those three-hour broadcasts.

Fans of WPBX's program Eclectic Café will recognize the name and voice of Bonnie Grice, Smith's wife of twelve years. Hired by Smith as a broadcaster for KUSC, Grice joined WPBX when the couple moved east, where they bought a house not far from the campus. Another popular broadcaster, Roger Rosenblatt – a well-known commentator whom Smith was delighted to welcome to the team – brings many interesting guests, both local and national, to his program, "Roger Rosenblatt: An American Essay" (formerly "Not The News").

What are Smith's plans for the future of the station?

"I want to develop a morning program of local and regional news," said Smith. He is also very excited about a "powerhouse of a new program from L.A., the Tavis Smiley show (tune in at 7 a.m. weekdays). This is the first major, daily news-talk program from NPR produced and hosted by an African-American."

Coupled with Smith's never-ending attempt to broaden the voice of diversity, "to give people, if they choose, the opportunity to broaden their perspectives by having news as well as jazz generated by people usually outside the establishment," is his hope to make WPBX a major source of news and information about Long Island.

"With the exception of Channel 12, we're not getting much news about the island at all. We hope to carry the reputation of Long Island, along with national programming, around the world."

Modest ambitions, as usual. •

struction is ongoing. Since that time, a new law was passed limiting residences to a maximum of 20,000 square feet in the town of Southampton.

The D. E. C. was out on Friday and estimated the fill to be far in excess of three thousand feet. The project has been shut down until the excess fill is removed. That would be $100,000 in, plus $70,000 out, equals $170,000 of cost for $30,000 worth of fill.

One wonders if the town ought to look at what people are allowed to do or not allowed to do with the ground that they purchase. There are now laws against clearing trees. What about the ground itself? Here you have either wetlands or former farmland, rich Bridgehampton loam, laced with all sorts of worms, bugs, reeds, plants, shrubs and flowers, just suffocated in an instant by bulldozers bringing in truckload after truckload of raw fill and dumping them. Four years ago, shortly after Ira Rennert got his approvals, he had men with bulldozers come in and strip off all the beautiful farm topsoil on the property and have it carted off to who knows where. This was more than 50 acres worth of topsoil. He has replaced it with his own special brand of topsoil, together with the various turfgro products and grass seed and trees and bushes of his choosing. What is there now, surrounding his faux Renaissance chateaux still under construction, is a landscape of his own making, totally different from the land that surrounds it on all sides, which is what you get to do to your property — in the absence of any local laws to the contrary — if you are a Master of the Universe. You create your own universe, build a fence around it, a gate with a gatehouse and guard. And there you are.

Interestingly, on the same day that the D. E. C. was tromping around on the platform on Jobs Lane, there was a demonstration at Southampton College, just eight miles away, urging the town to do more to provide affordable housing in the community. People marched with signs that read COLLEGE STUDENTS 4 AFFORDABLE HOUSING and NO MORE CASTLES. The marchers were asking for 1,400 square foot houses for those less fortunate. They marched on Montauk Highway and they marched up by Sunrise Highway near to what is known as the Friday "Trade Parade" where blue collar workers in pickup trucks make a huge traffic jam getting into and out of the Hamptons to where the work is from their homes further up the Island. They certainly can't afford to live here.

Among those marching were students, members of the Native American Shinnecock Tribe, members of the South Fork Progressive Coalition and some college teachers. Also Assemblyman Fred Thiele (D-Sag Harbor).

"Affordable housing is the most critical issue we will face in the next decade," he said. "Nearly half of all homes in Southampton are built as second homes and sit vacant most of the year. More than half of all homes built in East Hampton are second homes and sit vacant most of the year."

The marchers planned to sleep out on the front lawn of the campus that night, but rain drove them off. There are no limits to what a Master of the Universe, well, the REAL Master of the Universe, can do. •

WATERKEEPER ALLIANCE

There was an event to "Celebrate Our Waterways" at Man Ray last week. The Waterkeeper Alliance is an umbrella organization for thr eighty five Waterkeeper programs around the world. Its goal is to protect and restore waterways using community outreach, education and sometimes litigation. One of the objectives is to enact reforms in industrial hog farming. It is a "pet project" of Robert F. Kennedy Jr. who was on hand to speak to the celebrity filled group.

WINDOWS ON LONG ISLAND WINE

The site for the 12th annual Windows On Long Island Wine was Guastavino's on East 59th Street in NYC. A sell out crowd gathered to celebrate, taste award-winning wines from over twenty Long Island wineries, and sample cuisine from NYC & L.I. restaurants. There was a silent auction dedicated to works from sixteen premier artists including Dan Rattiner, who generously donated a work on paper entitled " Winning By A String". This year the event benefited The Earth Pledge Foundation founded in 1991 by Theodore W. Kheel, who focuses is on the long term survival of farming, and Windows Of Hope Family Relief Fund, founded in response to the tragic events of 9/11. The "Windows" relief fund aids the families of those who worked so hard at Windows On The World for eight of the events first eleven years. Well done.

With Susan Simm

A Chemistry Lesson

I know. It was hard enough to sit through it in high school. But a few rules committed to memory now will save many hours – and maybe many dollars – of unhappiness in the future.

Wine has four arch enemies: extreme heat, rapid temperature changes, air and, when storing for extended periods, light. While most wine is consumed within 48 hours of purchase, collectors – both large and small – need to consider these important factors when storing this precious liquid. And they become even more important when fine wine is to be stored for the benefit of bottle maturation. Remember, bottled wine is not static; it is not in suspended animation. Aging does not stop when it is bottled. Although wine ages differently in a bottle than in a barrel, it ages nonetheless.

Topping the list, excessive heat will destroy wine in a hurry. Temperatures greater than 70 degrees Fahrenheit will, besides age a bottled wine more quickly, often "cook" the flavors right out of it. I learned this lesson the unfortunate – and expensive – way when I left a full case of Chardonnay in the back seat of my car on a late spring evening (like those coming up shortly) only to remember it too late the next day after the temperatures had climbed into the 80s and temperature inside the car was well above that. The wine? Not happy.

Sharing top billing with heat in the enemy department are rapid temperature changes. These can cause pressure changes in the bottle, forcing the cork upwards, which allows air – enemy number three – to enter the bottle.

When exposed to air for prolonged periods – as opposed to an hour or two, which can often improve the taste of a red wine – wine undergoes a process called oxidation. This causes that unappealing, brownish color and Sherry-like taste often associated with "bad" wine, something all serious wine drinkers have experienced at least once.

Light, when wine is to be stored for an extended period, becomes more important as the length of storage time increases. Ever notice how drapes fade on the side

Long Island's Beautiful, Feathered Fisherman: The Osprey

By David M. Szczepankowski

As we've all noticed, the weather has been unusual during the past several years. Many people believe that much of this strange weather is due to human activity changing the earth's atmosphere. But nature proves time and time again to be resilient and, in some cases, humans have actually had a hand in helping protect nature. If you live or travel near a bay, marsh or a pond, you have probably noticed that the ospreys are back from their winter homes. Their return is a sign of spring as well as a beacon of hope that people can do something to help, not just harm, our magnificent natural environment.

The ultimate angler

Ospreys, also known locally as fish hawks due to their diet, are large, majestic birds distinguished in flight by white underparts and a distinctive crook formed by their long, narrow wings. The head is white with a dark crown and, if you catch sight of one in your binoculars, the feathers look slightly disheveled and the brows give the appearance of fierceness. Ospreys, who dine mostly on fish, hover and then drop, talons first, dramatically into the water after their prey. Their hunting accuracy is amazing to watch.

Years ago, as you may know, there were many ospreys on eastern Long Island as well as the Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts coastline. In fact, in the late 1940s between New York City and Boston, there were an estimated 1,000 active osprey nesting sites. But habitat destruction and pesticide use, especially DDT, wreaked havoc with the species by ruining natural nesting areas and making the shells of their eggs too thin to make it through the incubation period without breaking. By 1969, the 1,000 active nests had dwindled to 150 and it looked like the osprey was likely to become another casualty of human excess. But, since 1974, when the osprey population hit its all-time low–there were only nine active nests left out of the original 1,000 – ospreys have staged a comeback. And humans, once the cause of their demise, have been greatly responsible for their return.

During the '70s, DDT and its family of chemicals (organochlorines)– the precursors to Temik – were banned or severely restricted. Then, departments of environmental conservation (in all the northeast coastline states) built, and encouraged others to build, nest towers to serve as suitable places for the osprey to raise their young. This idea has worked extremely well, even in areas more heavily populated than the East End. In fact, I noticed a pair of osprey preparing a nest on a nesting tower near our home in Manhasset (western Nassau County) several weeks ago. In addition, public awareness of the osprey's plight was an important element in the success that the hawks have enjoyed. People just didn't want one of our most extraordinary local birds to become extinct.

Ospreys usually return to our area in late March or early April. A friend of mine who fishes for a living said that the osprey's return coincides with the alewife-spawning season. The alewife, on their way to spawning grounds in creeks, is caught by ravenous osprey in need of food after the long flight from the South.

Right now, if you look at one of the many nesting towers, you may not see much activity, but if you have a pair of binoculars, take a closer look. The small white head sticking out over the top of the nest is the female osprey sitting on the eggs, which come in a variety of colors ranging from pinkish white to a cinnamon brown and are mottled with dark brown splotches. Typically, osprey lay three eggs each year – but not all at once – so the chicks hatch at intervals. Since chicks take about one month to hatch, we should start seeing signs of chick activity in the nests any day now.

About two months after hatching, the young ospreys are ready for their first flight. So keep your eyes peeled in July and you may get to see the awkward teenaged osprey getting parental encouragement. The youngsters stay with their parents for the rest of the summer and make the flight down to the wintering grounds, but they don't come back for two to three years. When they do return, it's to breed for the first time and start the life cycle over again.

Even though the osprey has made wonderful strides back from the brink of extinction, humans still have the ability to ruin their progress. Development along the shorelines not only destroys nesting areas, it also encourages the growth of populations of predators such as raccoons that can easily climb into nests and eat osprey eggs and small chicks. Additionally, careless littering of things like the plastic rings that hold six-packs together and monofilament fishing line along the shore where ospreys hunt could cause the strangulation of a young bird.

Finally, though it may be tempting to get up close to a nest tower, when the osprey are incubating their eggs and especially after the chicks have hatched, stay a reasonable distance from the nest. If you're not sure how far to stay away, the osprey will tell you by making its danger call – a rapid series of loud, high-pitched peeps. By allowing ospreys to raise their young and watching their progress through binoculars from a safe distance, you too can help protect the future of this beautiful raptor that calls Long Island home.

exposed to the glass? Light can cause chemical changes in wine exposed for extended periods and it goes without saying that wine should never, ever be exposed to direct sunlight unless it is in your glass and headed shortly for your mouth.

A fifth enemy – humidity – while more controversial, can affect wines in long-term storage. Experts are divided here about the importance of maintaining a certain, constant humidity level versus just storing bottles on their sides, which keeps the corks moist by constant contact with the wine. In fact, in better wine shops, you may have noticed finer, if not all, wines stored this way. Now you know why.

Even if you are not planning to install a professional, climatically-controlled, state-of-the-art cellar in your home yet, a few storage tips will help beat the heat this summer.

Before choosing a space, make sure it will accommodate the number of bottles you usually keep on hand. Basements and sun-protected garages, naturally cool, moist locations, can often fill the bill if not too damp and even a space under a stairwell may work. If you want to go to the next level, consider an under-counter, temperature-controlled wine cabinet. In addition to properly storing wines, they also look swell. Viking's 24" wine cooler holds 50 bottles, adjusts from 40-60 degrees F, retails for less than $1,400 and tops my list.

Next week: How Newton's theory of gravity affects the quality of the wine you drink. Just kidding. Cheers.

Lens Factor

Although we know you are not shallow enough to care about something like "looking cool" this summer, but it is still good to know that there are literally thousands of options for you to choose from to protect your eyes from the sun's rays. Many fashion gurus are fresh in the market this year, with names like Marc Jacobs and Jean Paul Gautier launching new lines of specs.

Sunglasses are a good indication of one's personal style, often they become an extension of the face just as a pair of eyeglasses or a haircut does. The standard brands are in the game, but a word of warning, if you are really going to take care of your eyes properly, which is important, sunglasses can get quite expensive. You may have already missed the winter sales at the surf shops, in which case prices for high performance glasses start at around sixty-dollars and can cost as much as five hundred dollars. Shades are an investment in your personal wellness, the UV rays from the sun can be damaging to your eyes after prolonged exposure. And on top of that, squinting is just plain unattractive.

Smith Sliders: change your lense with your mood

The surfing and boating season is just getting going and the early season sun is strong, even if the temperatures are still a little cool. Some of the old standby performance brands like Maui Jim, Hobie, Bolle and Vaurnet have new styles and finishes. The fun of this season's designs is the bright colors and the varied scales of the frames. Some really immense, some very narrow, some bright pink and some of the styles have no frames at all. Performance brands have gone funky, functional and most importantly, cool.

Smith's Sliders are one of the hottest styles out there. And although they are not new this season, they have become the accessories of choice for extreme bikers and skaters alike. As the name explains, Sliders have lenses that can be slipped in and out of the frame and swapped for different colors and levels of protection. For the morning light the orange lenses add some brightness but shields glare. The midday lenses are a gray tinted darker lens for the day's strongest beams. And in the evening when you are riding home or stopping for some post beach cocktails, the yellow lenses will illuminate whatever you look at, and are even good for nighttime wear out on the deck or inside for a too-cool-for-school effect. There are twelve different color lenses to slip into your sliders.

Sliders come with many different frames: big, small, tortoiseshell, black, red, gold and silver – just to name a few. Smiths have a lifetime guarantee, so they will replace one of the lenses if you happen to crack them or if some drunk Betty sits on them at the bar.

Other top beach brands are Arnette and Oakley. Both have been around forever and have moved into new styles and line extensions to meet the demands for their products. Top Arnette styles include Swingers and the legendary Catfish. Oakley has done extremely well with their Killer Loops and they continue to introduce new colors and styles.

Arnette Swingers

As high fashion designers have decided that clothing is just not a large enough repertoire for them, most of the top designers have gotten heavy into designing accessories. Muses like Paul Smith and Calvin Klein even have their own sunglasses outposts separate from their flagship clothing stores. And obviously people are liking them, because this seasons' collections are flying out the door.

Not many brands have as much cachet with label conscious shoppers as Prada. Muichini Prada has extended the company's sunglass lines with even more offerings from Prada and Mui Mui. Mui Mui's spring and summer collections feature the casual beach motif and their shades are a perfect compliment.

Remember Giselle in fur with her bronzed man by her side, sporting the frameless shades of Dolce and Gabbana? The Italian designers are doing famously with their shades and along with Chanel, they have become the shades of choice among the L.A. set. Expect to see many-a-pair of these on Main Street in East Hampton this summer.

Classic Gucci

Get your glasses now, because the key to pulling off a look is by making the style your own. You want be unique and although there are many desirable brands, personal expression is all about you. Turn to the performance brands and high fashion to give you the look you desire and protect your eyes in the process, with no squinting.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

HAPPY MOTHER'S DAY to all the Moms out there. And a special one to my mom, and daughter Michele and daughters-in-law, Janie and Maria...

This is a busy shopping week and as we move into the summer season there will be lots of communions, confirmations, graduations and summer pleasures. But this is Mother's Day so let's do some happy shopping.

A new shipment of quality teak furniture direct from The John Rogers Outlet factory in Java has just arrived. Located on Main Street in Southampton this is a must see. You can purchase them unassembled or assembled at really affordable prices. And, with the ad in Dan's Papers you will receive an additional 5% off. Can't beat that!

At Hampton Interiors on North Main Street in Southampton, a shipment has just arrived of vintage night light tea cup, designed and made by Cynthia's Bedroom Treasures that retails for only $35. Hurry, they are flying out the door. They are also available at Fay Teller Salon on Corwith Street in Bridghampton. A perfect Mother's Day gift for your perfect mom. She will love it.

Nearby at Complements Lingerie, on Main Street in Bridgehampton, you will find quality lingerie and accessories that are a perfect Mother's Day gift. Check this shop out, you will love it.

Gift giving is easy at T.J. Maxx; you will find thousands of quality gifts, all at incredible savings off department and specialty store prices. I wandered around the store in Bridgehampton Commons the other day and found great gift ideas such as bath and body sets, fragrances, gardening tools and decorations, hand-cut crystal and glass, photo frames and decorative storage, luggage and accessories, gourmet cookware, fashion sleepwear and of course lots of fabulous 14kt gold and sterling silver jewelry. And if you can't decide, there is always the Maxx gift card available in all T.J. Maxx stores. Have fun shopping here!

Right next door at Payless Shoe Store everything in the store is half price...Wow, what a deal this one is. I wound up buying seven pairs of shoes and sandals. Don't miss out on this one, it's a goodie.

At McNamara's also in the Bridgehampton Commons you will enjoy shopping and choosing the greatest Long Island wines for a special dinner at Mom's this weekend. And if you can't find it, Mac will get it for you. I think?

Vintage teacup night light by Bedroom Treasures

Heading east I stopped off at Treasure Island in the Wainscott Village Center on Montauk Highway for a look at what was new in outdoor furniture. Here you will find a large selection, many of which are exclusive to Treasure Island. Loved the beautiful cast aluminum, all weather wicker and the classic wrought iron and teak. Treasure Island carries a full line of hammocks, cushions, furniture covers and accessories. "It is a most unusual store."

On Main Street in East Hampton at Mayfair Diamonds and Fine Jewelry they are holding a special raffle for Mother's Day and the prize is a beautiful 18-karat yellow gold and precious stone, Sweethearts and Kisses heart pendant by renowned jewelry designer Charles Kruypell. The pendant retails for $800 but only one lucky entrant will win it at the drawing held at Mayfair Jewelers on Saturday, May 25. Entry days are Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 10, 11 and 12 and no purchase is necessary to enter. Give Mayfair Jewelers a call for further information at 631-329-8444. Good luck, hope you win!

On Newtown Lane in East Hampton at Second Nature Markets you will find a great selection of fine gifts for Mom including a special gift box chock-full of special Kiehl's products for $34.50 Ohh, better stock up on your Kiehl's sunblock...It's time. Check out the Kiehl's Mother's Day Grapefruit Gift set, too; that's a gift that every mom will enjoy.

Run over to Hren's Nursery Garden Center & Florist on Montauk Highway in East Hampton for a fresh arrangements of fine cut flowers of lilac, peony, roses, hydrangea, lily and more. Check out the flowering trees or shrubs with a 20% off. A nice lasting gift for mom on her special day.

For only $45 Wittendale's Florist and Greenhouses on Newtown Lane in East Hampton is having a Mother's Day special: one dozen beautifully arranged pink roses in a smashing vase.

Off the beaten path in Bay Shore on West Main Street you will find antiques and decorative objects for the most discriminating at Auleen Gardener Antiques & Decorative Objects. The main gallery offers a large selection of antique furniture, paintings and fine accessories. There is a new location also, 57 Park Avenue, Bay Shore, that is filled to the rafters with a vast array of garden, country and nautical antiques. Check this shop out, you will have a great time.

Have a great Mother's Day and enjoy the day. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Please e-mail me at shoptil@danspapers.com if you have any questions about shopping or are having a sale that you would like everyone to know about.

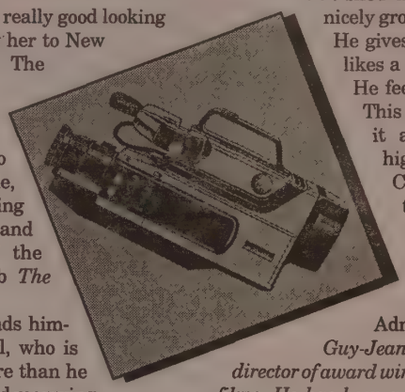
The Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Spring 2002

She's The One

In Saturday's, May 11 film, She's the One Long Island's middle class, middle o' the Island, middlin' to superior working stiffs with comfortably *un*stiff blue collars, are once again pictured with affectionate earthiness by L.I.'s favorite, movie making son, Edward Burns, just as well as he did with his award winning and, just plain, winning The Brothers McMullen. In the same way that "Dem Bums," the Dodgers, put Brooklyn on the map, Ed Burns put Long Island on the map in bold relief. They did it in a way that, whenever either of the places is mentioned wide, warm smiles stretch across everyone's faces.

Again, "brothers" are writer/director, Burns' subject. He plays the free-wheeling, cabbie brother, Mick, who is happy to be unfettered by profession or possessions. He was "serious" about a girl, Cameron Diaz, but he came home to find her under a big, hairy butt. His brother, Francis, portrayed by Mike McGlone with slippery-oily, well-groomed dark hair and a dark, oily attachment to money in the stock market, does not have much of an attachment to his wife, Jennifer Aniston, who has to retreat to another room with a warm vibrator when McGlone's bed is taken up with market reports. He tells Aniston that his missing performances are only "down cycles." As it turns out, he very frequently cycles down to Cameron Diaz's apartment to download. Could his have been the fuzzy buttocks on top of Cameron back when Burns Mickey got home? His own brother?



But, no matter, Burns picked up a really good looking fare to J.F.K. and wound up driving her to New Orleans for a wedding – theirs! The attractive, rather dusky-skinned fare is Maxine Bahns, a waitress who is momentarily waiting to continue her education in Paris. Is she too ambitious for Burns' easygoing lifestyle, the main attraction of which is going out fishing with dad (John Mahoney) and beer, cigars and philosophy (of the Budweiser type) on the family tub The Fighting Fitzpatricks?

Money-baggy brother, Francis, finds himself jealous of a very old man, Carl, who is pleasing Cameron (in bed), a lot more than he is and he thinks divorcing Aniston and marrying Cameron will solve the problem. Then there's another problem; Maxine's girlfriend loves her and the question becomes: can Burns Mickey give up cabbing and boating and go to Paris? Paris ain't the south shore!

Don't expect any instant solutions. Expect, instead, hearty-har-har laughs, warm fuzzy, family attachment, as well as fuzzy buns. Don't expect to see the brothers' Mom . . . she's always out somewhere. Oh yeah, the nicely groomed chauffeur is Malachy McCourt. He gives counsel to money bro', Francis who likes a new Porsche. Why drive a '74 Buick? He feels this way about his marriage, too. This movie mixes old and new. Consider it a speed bump on the information highway. Pull over to Southampton College and relax and enjoy. I'll be there. I'm Guy Jean de Fraumeni, hosting with Sarah Halsey and refreshments. It starts at 2 p.m. in Chancellor's Hall, the new, large building at the main parking lot. Admission is FREE so be early.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer / writer / director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Short • Cuts

Hollywood Ending – (114 minutes) The latest from Woody Allen starring Tea Leoni. Allen plays a washed up Hollywood director who seeks one more chance to direct a masterpiece film. The film is rated R.

Spiderman – (121 minutes) Boy is bitten by a genetically altered spider and gains superhero powers. Great special effects and romance between Toby McGuire and Kirsten Dunst. The film is rated PG-13.

Murder By Numbers – (94 minutes) Sandra Bullock tries to bust two high school students suspected of murder. The film is rated R.

Unfaithful – (115 minutes) A woman cheats on her husband (Richard Gere) and he catches her and this leads to crime and passion. With Diane Lane and Olivier Martinez. The film is rated R.

Changing Lanes – (99 minutes) Two men from different worlds meet in a chance car accident, which changes both of their circumstances in life. With Ben Affleck as a high profile lawyer and Samuel L. Jackson as well off businessman. The film is rated R.

The Scorpion King – (88 minutes) The prequel to The Mummy and The Mummy Returns starring WWF celeb The Rock. The film is rated PG-13.

Pinero – (100 minutes) The story of poet Miguel Pinero living in the Lower East Side of Manhattan as portrayed by Benjamin Bratt. This film is rated R.

Murder By Numbers – (94 minutes) Sandra Bullock plays a crime scene investigator hot on the trail of two high school students who think they've discovered the means to get a way with murder. This film is rated R.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

Saturday May 11 - SHE'S THE ONE
Long Island's own triple-threat film maker, Edward Burn's follow-up of his winning, The Brothers McMullen, delivers more of his sage wit, funny and serious situations and winning performances by Jennifer Aniston, Cameron Diaz and naturally, himself and The Island.

Saturday May 18 - Closed for Graduation

Saturday May 25 - GREY GARDENS
Back by popular demand, this somewhat shocking documentary remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a bit of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onassis) filmed in their decaying, overgrown mansion in East Hampton. A hauntingly memorable experience.

ELI WALLACH AND RICHARD MINSKY AT NEW YORK GALLERIES

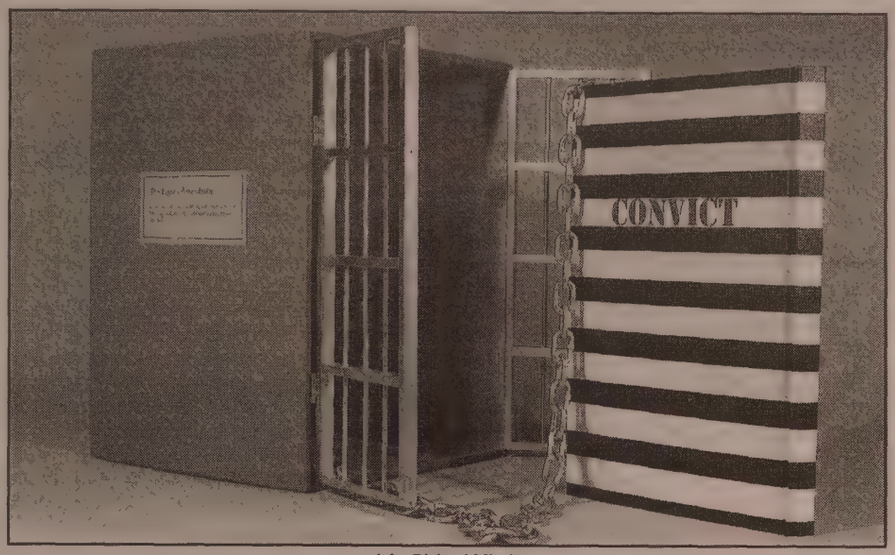
"The Actor as Photographer" now at Manhattan's Leica Gallery is an exhibit of particular interest and not merely because its creator, Eli Wallach, is a longtime, active resident in the Hamptons. We are also drawn to the exhibit out of curiosity: will these photographs evoke a big ego or will they reveal an innerself? Or will they manifest a genuine talent for picture making previously unknown to the public?

The show may provoke all three responses, although there's not much to prove that Mr. Wallach has a big ego except if you count his typical Hollywood photo from the film, Magnificent Seven. Actually, we would have liked more pictures from his various sets; Mr. Wallach has been in some very important movies.

Regardless, we're left with a priceless image from Baby Doll, where Karl Malden and Elia Kazan are leaning in the direction of a tilted, dilapidated house. While the photo is probably a product of pure whimsy, it's also an ironic one. (The tilting figures signify cinematic Expressionism, yet experts know that Kazan's Baby Doll is a landmark in Realism.)

Considering the pictures which may illustrate Mr. Wallach's inner self, there is more evidence of this in his sensitive family portraits; his photographic talents are also uncovered with his fine composition and lighting in "Anne Jackson amidst the Banyon Trees" and "Man in Cafe, Vienna."

Mr. Wallach as a social commentator is an added bonus, however, especially in "His Master's Voice," where a dog is chained to his owner's motorscooter. We'd like to see more examples like this one.



work by Richard Minsky

"The Bill of Rights" currently at SoHo's Louis Meisel Gallery is a show which also generates interest: bookbinder Richard Minsky is a former resident and a Hamptons' exhibitor. His art works which detail the first Ten Amendments accompanied by respected books are not only imaginative but also relevant.

Consider his "Freedom of Speech" amendment, paired with Rushdie's The Satanic Verses. What's fascinating is that the art work resembles a temple (at least to this critic), an appropriate symbol for an amendment that signifies America. The Sixth Amendment's right to a speedy trial is represented by a bloody glove. (The book is Toobin's The Run of His Life: The People v. O.J. Simpson.)

The Eighth Amendment, which protects against excessive bail, is represented by Sullivan's Forlorn Hope: The Prison Reform Movement. Here Mr. Minsky applies his sense of humor with a motif featuring jailbird stripes and chains.

Mr. Minsky has a particular talent for getting to the heart of the matter by selecting just the right image. Such visuals deliver an aesthetic impact while also evoking an essential message. His art makes us think about both form and content: the intention of all art, literary and otherwise.

Eli Wallach's show will be at the Leica Gallery (670 Broadway) until May 18; Richard Minsky's exhibit will be on view at the Meisel Gallery (141 Prince) until June 1.

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Hollywood Ending

Everyone screamed, "I Love You!," when we screened Woody Allen's, Everyone says I Love You, at Southampton College at our "Dan's Paper's They Made The Movies Here" Film Festival. Screaming at screenings is expected when the movies are Woody's – he pokes and jabs at a lot of foibles and we accept them as ours, because we know they are his. Beyond his self-depreciating, soft vulnerability, half-shaded by his leaden eyelids that hang like a pall over his soul behind that murky mush is the big, bright, hard arrogance bestowed upon film directors, which allows him to cast himself as God's gift to women and other unsavory roles . . . fictional or real. But, face it, the Director is God and Woody makes the most of it – on or off film.

In his latest film, Hollywood Ending (which will open the Cannes Film Festival), Woody is an Oscar-winning director who is a dangling has been. His ex-wife, who is sleeping with a Hollywood producer, gets her Burbank – banked lover to give her holes-in-his-shoes, New York director a comeback shot. The movie's director (not necessarily Woody, but, if the shoe fits) is neurotically unstable, vainglorious, uncontrollably critical and complaining (not to mention, jealous). So, how does he handle the opportunity? He goes hysterically blind. We can argue that some directors worked as if blind (especially those cheapy, weepy wide-screen, space-fillers), but this gimmick gives Woody a wider if shaky, platform for (of all things) sight gags of the slapstick type.

Hollywood is one of the Wood's favorite and easiest targets. Even sightless, it's like hitting the side of a barn. So, drawing a bead on the Hollywood producer, played on target by Treat Williams, Woody kvetches, "He rides around in a 1939 Mercedes! Himmler rode around in a 1939 Mercedes! " The love interest of Woody and the producer, is the model, Tea Leoni. I don't know how Woody (the real director... you know, the fella with the thick horn-rim glasses who can see) does it. He actually gets Ms. Leoni to appear less like a fiberglass mannequin. And, a real treat (not Williams) is George Hamilton, as a studio parasite keeping a nicely eye-lashed eye on production. His sun-tanned well-manicured nose and smirk personify Hollywood. Most insist Allen does not direct actors and as God, I guess he doesn't have to. It seemed, at the screening of Everyone Says I Love You, that the nostalgia that Allen steeps his movies in is giving them a permanent sugarcoated blush of agelessness and gloss, like the late 1930's glamorous white telephones in the movies. They look good. They tell us about us. They're amusing, They're HOLLYWOOD! Woody Allen keeps chipping away at Hollywood as if anyone can change a nostril on Mount Rushmore. I think that, like Hollywood chiselers, he is creating things in his own image. That is the ultimate Hollywood Ending.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been the judge at Major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey theatre review: into the woods... by barry gordin

Tales told in Into the Woods

Sounds of the forest filled the Broadhurst Theatre where the revival of Stephen Sondheim's 1987 musical Into the Woods opened last week. It is another subtle reminder of the lack of new material on the Great White Way where the staggering cost to mount a Broadway show, especially a new musical, has producers running scared and returning to successful originals.

The current revival of Into the Woods, a fairy tale for adults and children alike, is an excellent production and great fun. James Lapine, who is responsible for the original book, has once again also directed. This commercially slick Disney-like production lacks the ethereal quality of the original, but the beautiful Sondheim music remains intact. Some of his finest songs show up here, the cautionary Children Will Listen and the haunting No One Is Alone. The scenery by Douglas W. Schmidt and the costumes by Susan Hilferty are charming; they set and maintain the mood of the production. The message of Into the Woods has been made clear: expect the unexpected and happy endings can be deceiving.

The story merges four Grimm's fairy tales with that of a childless baker and his wife, who attempt to reverse a family curse so they might have the child they desire. The characters from Cinderella, Rapunzel, Little Red Riding Hood and Jack the Giant Killer all cross paths with the baker and his wife in the woods, where all are in search of fulfillment of one kind or another. The first act moves along cleverly, at a brisk pace, bringing everyone the happy ending they desire. The second act, which does not fare quite as well, concerns what happens afterwards. The characters criss-cross through the woods learning the harsh realities of the world, where nothing is quite what it seems and the truth is sometimes elusive. The woods are symbolic of the world where danger lurks and unknown mysteries lie. Both acts have moments which touch the heart.

As the witch, Vanessa Williams has star presence and is great fun to watch.

Her transformation from the ugly witch into glamorous woman is truly theatrical. Her performance, however, is heavy with wiggle as she sashays her stuff around the stage. She has a lovely voice and sings well, but the songs' messages are lost on her and she is missing the purity of Bernadette Peters in the original. Still as a marketing tool she is a good bet, the children will love her and will be amazed by her transformation.

The performances of the other actors are all very good. Laura Benanti as Cinderella has a beautiful singing voice and grounds her character in reality. Gregg Edelman is a stand out as her prince, Christopher Sieber as the other prince is also good and the two together are delightfully devious as wolves. Stephen DeRosa has a keen sense of urgency and is wonderful as the baker, Kerry O'Malley is amusingly confused as his wife, Melissa Dye is the neurotic Rapunzel, and John McMartin is ever so relaxed as the narrator, who knows it all. Marylouise Burke as Jack's mother is funny and entertaining. Newcomers, Molly Ephraim as Little Red and Adam Wylie as Jack, also score in a cast, which, as a whole, is uniformly good.

A cow with a mechanical head played by Chad Kimball replaces the original cardboard cow. It feels contrived. This is a problem with the entire production. The innocence is calculated. The direction always seems to be winking at you. The jokes are sometimes crude seeking the desired laugh. The production could have been even better without all the gimmicks. Still, there are lessons on life delivered with style and fun. Despite the shortcomings, it is great entertainment for the family. Revivals of highly successful originals are difficult and as far as revivals go this new production deserves to be seen and enjoyed by a new generation of theatergoers. Sondheim, after all, is Sondheim.

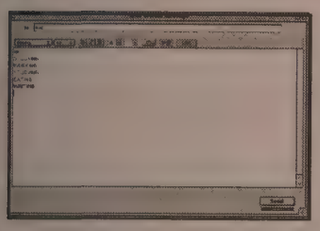
Away At School by David Rattiner



Instant Messenger

One of the many advantages of being in college in the 21st century is having a computer at your desk when you need or want to do something. Whenever I want to see a movie, I just check out what time the show is playing online, read the review and off I go. But the most important part of owning a computer as a college student is no secret. Of course I am talking about the now famous AOL Instant Messenger service. It keeps you in touch with all of your friends and family at all times, you can trade pictures instantaneously, and you can talk to everyone just like you would on the phone, only instead of speaking, you're typing. Another economical advantage of the service is that AOL provides it for free. All you have to do is go to the web site and download it. The process takes only two minutes. The only problem is thinking up a screen name and buddy icon that best characterize you.

Unfortunately, this is the hardest part of getting the service. Let's say that you are an average male who really likes sports, so you figure that the name Sportguy would suit you well. Now this name may have taken you an hour to come up with, but when you punch it in to the computer, it tells you that you cannot use the name sportguy. Somebody else already has. AOL then comes up with a variety of different names for you like Sportguy78432 but that just means that 78431 people have thought of the same thing.

The thing that really has amazed me is how Instant Messenger has been affecting my daily life. For example, the away message that I leave online for people to view is almost always my entire day's schedule. I feel like there is no mystery to what I'm doing. If I am going to go eat, I type FOOD on my away message, if I am sleeping, I type RELAXING. There is really no reason as to why I do this. I know that it is not necessary; it is not like anyone really cares or is going to want to check up on me. Lately, I have been realizing how I could trick people into thinking I am doing things I am not. For example instead of typing in SLEEPING, I could type in HOMEWORK. This way, nobody would know what I am doing except for me. Which is the way it should be in the first place.

Along with the benefits, there are some terrible side effects to the service that people really need to watch out for. For example, whenever you have a conversation online with somebody and they type something that makes you laugh, you type in the word "lol." Lol stands for "laughing out loud." Whenever I think of the word lol, it is because of something funny. The only difference between me and many other people who use AOL Instant Messenger is that I view lol as a word and other people view it as three letters.

It is much better to think of it as three separate letters when you are talking online simply to prevent embarrassment. There have been numerous occasions in the past three months where somebody has told me a joke or funny story in "real life" and at the punch line where everybody else laughs, I will think in my head lol and then I'll say it out loud. I have had people laugh in my face for saying the word lol outside the computer world. I really hope that I am not the only one in the world that does this.

There are other words that have been invented because of AOL. The word "brb" stands for "be right back" and "rotfl" stands for "rolling on the floor laughing." I really don't understand why it is so bad to use these words in general conversation with somebody, but it is completely acceptable to use them on the Internet.

The AOL Instant Messenger service is free. But the day AOL thinks that they should charge Thirty bucks a month for it, will be the day that everyone starts using a different kind of messaging service. There will be mass chain letters all across the country to decide which instant messenger program to use. Riots may occur. That's probably why AOL doesn't charge for the service. As far as the new lingo goes, just read the words as letters and you will be fine.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

The value of every man for himself works as well in the home kitchen as anywhere else. Well guys, it's Mother's Day — so what are you going to cook? Pizza is fun to cook with the kids, grand kids or the neighbor's kids. The dough is easily prepared in the food processor and the tomato sauce is as basic as they come. Conversely the dough and the sauce may be purchased and assembled and baked with the cheeses as suggested.

Don't take any shortcuts with the shish kebabs however. It is challenging for the non-cook and a no-brainer for the guys who find cooking relaxing and rewarding. The colorful skewers of broiled or grilled marinated lamb and vegetables are a delicious anticipation. Rhubarb compote couldn't be more timely or quick to execute. You can accompany the lamb with the compote contrasting the meat with a cool and slightly tart edge, or serve as dessert spooned over ice cream of your choice.

What ever you decide to cook, celebrating Mom's Day is traditionally an appetizing event.

OLD-FASHIONED PIZZA

Just a basic pizza with tomato sauce and cheese and it's all do-ahead.
Serves 6-8

For the dough:
1 package active dry yeast
Scant 1 cup lukewarm water (105-115 degrees)
2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoons olive oil

For the sauce:
1 tablespoons olive oil
2-3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) plum tomatoes
1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon dry thyme
8-10 fresh basil leaves
1/2 pound fresh mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Dissolve the yeast in a cup measure and stir to mix. Let stand five minutes. Put 2 cups flour in a large bowl and make a well in the center. Pour in the dissolved yeast, salt and oil. With a wooden spoon, slowly work the flour from the inside of the well into the liquid. Stir until you have a solid mass.

2. Turn the dough onto a lightly floured board and knead until smooth or transfer to the workbowl of a food processor and process 1 minute or just until a ball of dough is formed. Transfer to a lightly floured board and knead for 30 seconds longer. Make a ball and put into a lightly greased bowl. Cover and let rest until doubled in size, about 1 hour.

3. In a saucepan heat the oil. Add garlic and saute for 30-40 seconds, stirring. Put in tomatoes and their juice, season with salt, pepper and thyme. Stir to mix breaking up the tomatoes with the side of a spoon. Simmer for 15-20 minutes, uncovered, or until some of the liquid evaporates. Can be prepared ahead and refrigerated in a suitable container.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

4. Punch dough down in the bowl and transfer to a lightly floured surface. Roll out dough as well as possible then stretch with hands into a round on a flat sheet or pizza pan. Spread sauce over the dough leaving a 1/2-inch border. Arrange basil over the sauce, an even layer of mozzarella then sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in preheated oven for 30-35 minutes until crust is golden and cheese melts. Transfer to a wooden board and cut into wedges for serving.

LAMB SHISH KEBAB

While leg of lamb is the traditional choice for cooking shish kebab, beef and firm fish, such as swordfish cut into cubes, can also be used.
Serves 4-6

For the lamb and the marinade:
3 lbs. cubed leg of lamb
1 cup olive oil
1/3 cup lemon juice
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon allspice
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the skewers:
3 medium onions, quartered
3 red or green pepper, cored, seeded and cut into sections
1 container cherry tomatoes
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup port wine
Metal skewers or wood skewers soaked for 30 minutes

1. Cut lamb into 1 1/2-inch cubes and put into a mixing bowl. Combine marinade ingredients and pour over the lamb. Stir the pieces of meat to coat, cover bowl and marinate for several hours or overnight.

2. Prepare vegetables ahead and season with lemon juice and port wine. When ready to cook thread lamb cubes on skewers, about 4-5 cubes per skewer, alternating with pieces of pepper, onion and whole cherry tomatoes. Brush with oil before cooking. Broil or grill kebabs weather permitting.

3. To broil: Preheat broiler to highest setting and place skewers 3-4 inches from heat source. Broiling time is about 9-12 minutes for medium-rare to medium. Salt and pepper the meat as you turn it. Grilling time should be approximately the same. Serve over hot rice, if desired.

RHUBARB COMPOTE

A versatile and refreshing light compote to serve with fish or meat. Or, over ice cream.

1 1/2 pounds rhubarb, leaves discarded
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
Grated zest of 1 navel orange
Juice of orange

1. Rinse rhubarb stalks and cut into 1-inch pieces. Put into a heavy saucepan with the sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg, orange zest and juice. Simmer over low heat until the rhubarb has broken down. Taste to adjust sweetness as necessary. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container.

Dining in The Hamptons

Star Room
378 Montauk Highway, Wainscott
631-537-3332

They are trying to do something different at the Star Room in Wainscott. In its second season on the way to reaching its full stride this summer, the restaurant has a lot planned. And gauging from the scene there last Saturday night, Star Room is set to do something really different this summer – and the crowds are already in tow to check it out.

Started with a concept and a dream last summer, the Star Room opened with the vision of becoming a place where people could enjoy top cuisine and stylish libations in a groovy setting. The restaurant sits adjacent to Club SWA and the two together may be one of the hottest spots this season. It has everything that one would hope for in a night out. Atmosphere, gourmet cuisine, music and dancing all night. Lined up to spin this summer are DJs Marc and Samantha Ronson as well as bands playing live most weekends.

With the tall, comfortable chairs and the supper club feeling, the dining room is loungy and chic, a perfect place to begin your night out or to pass the evening with a group of friends. The Star Room is unique because despite everything else that it has going for it, its true raison d'etre is the cuisine.

The menu is diverse enough to suit all different appetites, and you must come back on different occasions depending on your mood, because the Star Room is a good time for both the serious culinary aficionado and the cocktail swiller out on the town. A good time will certainly be had this summer.

The appetizers begin with two salads that are simple combinations and they are delicious – an excellent way to start the meal with one of their wines by the glass or one of the five cold sakes on the menu. Standouts on the wine list include an Australian Babich Sauvingnon Blanc ($8) and a Central Coast Echelon Pinot Noir ($9). We sampled the upland cress and pear salad that was finished with maytag blue cheese and a sherry vinaigrette.

Star Room's appetizers offer a diverse selection ranging from salads to an ample selection of raw shellfish and oysters to nicely dressed sashimi and a tuna poke.

Also, Executive Chef Kevin Penner is especially good with fish so this summer's menu is sure to be filled with plenty of fresh local selections.

The fish selections at Star Room are reason enough to come, nevermind the fun atmosphere and the beautiful people. We sampled the luscious roasted Maine skate that was so well prepared and flavorful, even at our table of true carnivoures, we were all vying for the last bite. Also offered is a roasted Montauk monkfish with shiitake and in-season morel mushrooms served with potato puree and finished with white truffle oil. An Asian-influenced halibut is served with bok choy, black thai rice and a green curry sauce. Also a lobster and peekytoe crab rissotto is finished with saffron and is a true winner.

We sampled the roasted filet mignon accompanied by shallots braised in red wine, another winner. A new addition to the menu is roasted lamb loin served with sun chokes in a black olive sauce. Expect the menu to change as the summer approaches and be ready for any number of tantalizing dishes to grace your table.

The service at Star Room is exactly what you would hope for. The servers are attractive and knowledgeable but they don't hover over you with any sort of forced formality. You feel like everyone at Star Room is having a good time. I overheard a women sitting at a back table say to co-owner Scott Storbo as he walked around the dining room to see how everyone was doing, "Well we are doing much better now that we found your restaurant."

Club SWA will be renamed Luna after Memorial Day, so you can look for great summer parties there every weekend. The patio is the perfect place to pass a summer evening with the Phillipe Starke furniture and garden lights. Star Room will soon be open seven nights a week for dinner and will serve a three course prix-fixe menu for twenty-seven dollars. Call them at 631-537-3332 for reservations.

Dining in The Hamptons

Side Dish
By Aji Jones

The summer is quickly approaching, and all of our favorite seasonal restaurants are starting to crawl out of hibernation, greeting the warmer months with new ideas and familiar faces.

Riccardo's Seafood House reopened this past Wednesday, kicking off what is sure to be a successful third season on Three Mile Harbor. Look for Chef/Owner Riccardo Traslavina's Latin-inflected seafood dishes like his famous ceviche and swordfish Veracruz – a favorite here at the Dish.

Also resurfacing last Wednesday was Ocean's Grillfish and Steak out on the Napeague stretch. Reopening for its second season (in a building known for its single-season blues), the kitchen will once again be under the careful supervision of Scott Jaffe.

Opening next Thursday, May 16, is the place Joanne Starkey of The New York Times deemed "the best Sag Harbor has to offer." The Beacon, on Water Street in downtown Sag Harbor, boasts what is probably the most expansive water vista to be found in the Hamptons. The Beacon's artful New American cuisine certainly gives the view a run for its money by commanding the diner's attention with creative seafood and pasta dishes.

Moving off the water, Cabaña, the nightclub and restaurant at the Capri Hotel in Southampton, will be opening in late May. Owner David Sarner has designed a new tapas-like menu with Pacific Rim influenced fare. And get this — the kitchen will be serving until 2:30 a.m. Now, that's way past the Dish's bedtime, but not everyone keeps the same humble hours. Talk about a late night snack. It's about time the Hamptons had a late night eating scene. It's bound to be lively!

The red/bar Brasserie will be open six nights for dinner starting May 13, remaining closed on Tuesdays. In season, they'll be open seven nights. Sounds like a good reason to dine in Southampton on a Monday night.

There are also a few notable pre-season prix fixe specials being offered by eateries that have braved the off-season (and survived!)...

Almond in Bridgehampton is offering a three-course prix fixe menu Thursday through Tuesday from 6 to 7 p.m. The menu features three appetizer choices, a choice of two entrees or any sandwich, and choice of two desserts. The selections change nightly and the cost is $19.00. Incidentally, the Dish heard a little feel-good news about Almond co-owner and front-man Eric Lemonides. It seems that Eric recently participated in the "Principal for a Day" program run by Public Education Needs Civic Involvement in Learning (PENCIL). Eric took the reins for a day at P.S. 24 in Flushing, Queens, joining a long list of luminaries who have participated in this program. Past principals include Governor Pataki, Bill Cosby, Michael Douglas, and Russell Simmons, to name just a few. Way to go Eric!

Turtle Crossing will also be offering a delicious prix fixe of two courses, consisting of any appetizer and any entrée from their regular menu for $20. If you want the sirloin, it'll only cost you an extra three bucks. What a deal!

Mother's Day is almost here, so book that special brunch now! Both Tierra Mar in Westhampton Beach and The Paradise Café in Sag Harbor are hosting elaborate Mother's Day brunches – perfect for the most important person in all of our lives.

Plaza Café in Southampton is hosting a five course Vintner's Dinner on Saturday, May 11, featuring the wines of Testarossa Vineyards. Rob Jensen, co-proprietor of Testarossa, will be presenting his selection of wines paired with creations by Plaza Café chef/owner Doug Gulija. The dinner will begin at 5:30 p.m., and costs $125 excluding tax and gratuity. The Dish can't wait.

Perfect Day For A Picnic

Just a perfect day/ Problems all left alone/ Weekenders on our own/ It's such fun

When Lou Reed envisioned his perfect day he might not quite have been picturing pastoral East End afternoons or wicker and gingham. Regardless, even crusty old craggy faced Lou would not be able to deny the call of a sun-dappled luminously green afternoon. The type of afternoon made for picnics. Even if you are the type who would rather be stabbed in the eyes with broken beer bottles than commune with whatever it is that drives men to fall to one knee and declare their undying love for a sunset, you can enjoy a picnic in style.

Oh it's such a perfect day/I'm glad I spent it with you

You will need to determine the size of your picnicking party. Will you need a basket for two (you and your honey), or a basket for four (a few friends), or even a larger picnic hamper? (Yes, you do need a basket.) In recent years some people have been sporting the atrocity known as the picnic backpack. The basket is essential; you must have one if you are to picnic correctly. (As a side note, never be afraid to use the word picnic as a verb.) For a basket, go to www.picnichouse.com or thepicnicstore.com. Besides attending to all of your personal picnic needs, both sites will ship picnic gift baskets full of food. A high quality picnic basket or hamper can generally be had for about $60 to $120 depending on the size and what sort of accessories you get. At the minimum, your basket should come complete with plates and silverware strapped and ready to travel.

Oh it's such a perfect day

To properly take advantage of your perfect day, you will need some tasty morsels to pack into your basket or hamper. The perfect accompaniment to a perfect day can be a refreshing yet hearty salad. When noted cook Marcella Hazan gave a series of classes in Bridgehampton, one of the highlights was her Garlic-Scented Tomato Salad. Even after all the salad was gone, her students fought for the serving platter, to sop up the juices with bread. Her recipe calls for the following:

4 to 5 garlic cloves
Salt
Red Wine Vinegar
2 lbs. fresh, ripe, firm, round or plum tomatoes
1 dozen basil leaves
Extra virgin olive oil

1. Peel the garlic cloves and mash them with a knife handle. Put them in a small bowl or saucer 1 to 2 teaspoons salt and two teaspoons of vinegar. Stir and let steep at least twenty minutes.

2. Skin the tomatoes raw, using a swiveling blade peeler, cut them into thin slices, and spread the slices out on a serving tray.

3. Wash the basil leaves in cold water, shake off their moisture, tear by hand into two or three pieces each, and sprinkle them over the tomatoes.

4. Pour the garlic-steeped vinegar through a wire strainer, distributing it over the tomatoes. Add enough olive oil to coat the tomatoes well, toss, taste and correct, if necessary, for salt and vinegar, and serve.

You might want to prepare the slices of tomato and garlic-steeped vinegar ahead of time, then bring all the ingredients in your basket and prepare the salad on site. Don't forget a loaf of crusty Tuscan bread.

Drink Sangria in the park

Sangria is best cold. Try serving it with ice cubes made from wine to make sure the Sangria does not get diluted by melting ice. You'll need:

1 1/2 cups rum
1/2 cup white sugar
1 thinly sliced orange
1 thinly sliced lemon
1 thinly sliced lime
1 bottle dry red wine
1 cup freshly squeezed orange juice

Mix together the rum and sugar in a large glass pitcher until the sugar dissolves. Add the sliced fruit. Let sit for at least 2 hours and up to 6 hours in the refrigerator. Right before serving, add the red wine and orange juice. Stir well, and serve chilled.

Then later, a movie, too/And then home

You'll need somewhere to go after your picnic. The sun is shining, grab your basket and get out there to reap just what you sow.

About Face.....with Annette

Show Me The Light...

For some time now it has been known that light therapy, as well as deprivation of it, can affect our moods and all over general feeling of well being. In the winter, many people suffer from SAD, which stands for Seasonal Affective Disorder. Do you experience seasonal depression or the winter blues? Do you experience lower energy levels, weight gain, fatigue, interrupted sleep and irritability each fall and winter? These may be signs that you may be one of those who must have their dose of sunlight every day. You can pick up light boxes through several companies on the internet or check your local Home Depot for the bulbs.

Just as this replication of sunlight improves our feelings, so too, can colored light bulbs. Rachel Perry has a cool line of products that take you from relaxed (blue) to colors of sheer exhilaration (red). Yellow bulbs help with mental clarity and green brings us into balance and harmony. Orange aids respiratory and intestinal health and acts as an anti-depressant. Indigo is known to "open the doors of perception," reduce swelling and relieve pain. My favorite is violet purple, used for inspiration, love, wisdom and...weight loss. Rachel has a complementary mist to go along with each bulb and when used together, you may achieve a state of wellness. Once you have chosen the appropriate color, you spray your body with the mist, put on the matching bulb and find a quiet place to lie down and relax for the next twenty to thirty minutes. The mist can be used as a facial mist or as a body splash or body spritzer as well. There is scientific documentation that colored light rays (wavelengths) are received through the skin. Rachel's website is www.rachelperry.net

Coming in May from Simon and Schuster, a 160-page book with seventy-five color photographs and twenty-five color illustrations, written by Christina Bornstein and Anthony Gill, creators of Tony & Tina Cosmetics. The book is devoted to how color works, how color and energy are connected and how we can give ourselves the electromagnetic vibrations our bodies crave by feeding them the right colors for the right situation. They will explain the seven chakras, or energy centers in our bodies, and how each has long been associated with one of the seven colors of the spectrum. They will offer a simple diagnostic test that reveals exactly which color you need, as well as ten exercises to help you absorb the color energy you may be lacking. Readers will learn how the right color can actually cure insomnia, increase willpower, aid communication, relieve pain, encourage romance, promote success at work and help us all create the reality we desire. So, this is a great book to look for as a useful reference in applying our color therapy to our daily lives.

Just as color enhances our wardrobe, makeup, and personal decorating schemes around our homes... it is now time to bring it into our inner lives. Use color to celebrate life!

Turquoise Trends: Cool Stones For Hot Nights

In her upcoming movie, Full Frontal, Julia Roberts sports a $130 turquoise necklace with a Chinese cloisonné pendant by Marie Chavez. This is just one example of the age-old rule that past trends always resurface. Turquoise has bypassed its spiritual and astrological properties linked to it in the past and now makes a splash as a casual, but elegant statement for the summer. The stone's cool color makes it an obvious accessory choice for warmer weather.

The blue-green stone's popularity began before Christianity, when early Egyptians mined it in 6000 BC, and its appeal continued in Native American handcrafted jewelry. Meaning "Turkish stone," turquoise is also found in eastern Australia, Tibet, Afghanistan, as well as Egypt, Turkey and the Southwestern United States. Turquoise has gained such a reputation in the last few months that necklaces, bracelets, earrings and even belts featuring turquoise can be purchased at major department stores.

The allure of turquoise comes not only from its affordability, but also from its uniqueness; no two stone are the same. The color of the stones range from sky blue to "robin's egg" blue. The pure blue stones are more rare and, therefore, more valuable. Most turquoise stones contain a black matrix, sometimes referred to as "veins" or "spider webs." Many fans of turquoise find it is the matrix that makes each stone unique.

A popular place to acquire turquoise jewelry in the Hamptons is Wall Street Bead and Jewelry Exchange, off Main Street in Southampton. The owner, Ellen Paster, handcrafts the shop's wide selection with the assistance of Naomi Miller. Both have noticed turquoise's growing popularity this season, and, in fact, both are designing sets of necklaces and bracelets for customers. The demand increases as the summer approaches. "It's an attractive stone to wear in summer time," says Ellen. "And it looks good against a sun tan."

Wall Street Bead, now in its ninth summer of business, carries "ready-to-buy" turquoise necklaces, bracelets and earrings, but can also design jewelry to fit a customer's needs. For those who feel a little more creative, it's possible to buy stones and materials, design the jewelry, and put it together in the store, with a reasonable fee for use of the shop's work table and tools. For customers who have an idea for a necklace, but aren't sure about the design, Ellen and the employees of Wall Street Bead will gladly help choose the perfect combination. Turquoise can be strung with many other semi-precious stones, including orange carnelian, deep blue lapis, coral and ruby, as well as silver. The shop also sells turquoise set with 18-karat gold beads and pendants. The price of turquoise is determined by weight, size, color and polish. Strands of turquoise chips can be purchased for $9 and authentic Southwestern turquoise, bought from the Sleeping Beauty Mine in Arizona, costs $140. This specific type of turquoise is popular for its chartreuse-green coloring. "The color of turquoise calls to mind cool ocean breezes," adds Ellen.

Turquoise is a chemical product of copper and aluminum and is highly porous. Great care should be taken when cleaning the stones, as their color and shininess can change. Ellen recommends cleaning turquoise with a damp cloth without soap and shining the stones with baby oil. Be cautious when applying perfume and hair spray. Wall Street Bead and Jewelry Exchange also offers a wide selection of colorful glass beads and semi-precious stones, as well as all the materials and tools needed to craft jewelry. All of the shop's semi-precious stones come from Jaipur, India, known as the gemstone capital. Wall Street Bead is located on Wall Street, off of Main Street, in Southampton (283-6843).

Making Sense Of Dan's, One Room At Time

Prodution Potential

To call the production/editorial room at Dan's Papers an interior designer's nightmare (or, perhaps, an extremely rough framework with which to work) would be generous. It is, to quote our design conscious assistant editor – who has developed a slight tic from the state of the room – "cluttered, battered, improperly lit, lacking flow and continuity, void of any color scheme and flat out uninspired."

All accurate descriptions of the twenty-by-fifteen foot room that exists as an addition to the back of our Bridgehampton office. The room holds eight desks, all in a middling-brown faux wood finish, nine computers, a few of which are iMacs and provide a few bright spots, a handful of filing cabinets, a few "temporary shelves" that have attained permanent status, a blue "elementary school-style" short pile rug that has become threadbare in many spots, typical off-white walls, an art collection that challenges the definition eclectic, five fluorescent lights overhead and a solid smattering of clutter spread throughout.

It was into this space that Gabrielle Schlichting, an interior designer and decorator, stepped and – to her credit she was not overwhelmed by the state of the room – made a number of suggestions with a mind towards both economics and overall effect that would make the space both more attractive and productive. A Water Mill based designer, Schlichting has been decorating and designing with a style that she described as a "blend of the lightness and leanness of modernism with a combination of antique elements." Her portfolio bears out this philosophy and the transformations she has effected create homes that are at once more sophisticated and pleasing spaces without becoming more complicated or overburdened by detail. The opportunity to have Schlichting critique our work area at Dan's gave us the chance to see both the process and the method that she employs when designing.

The first thing to determine is what the client uses the space for and in which direction his taste runs. This, of course, is the first thing that Schlichting tries to figure out and her focus is on working with a client rather than imposing her views on what the client should have. There is a distinction between clients who have a design done by a famous designer in order to say their design was done by said famous designer and clients who are more interested in making a space reflect their aesthetics. Schlichting works with the former and within minutes of surveying the production room and posing a few questions about how we work, she said the carpet had to go and in its place we should have either a green rug, which produces a calming effect, or wood floors (which would be more expensive and therefore not an option for a budget conscious paper).

The next item on the redesign list would be the desks and she suggested modular units in a natural wood with rounded corners that would make the room flow better.

Why Rent? Everybody Is Buying

After 9/11 everyone was wondering what the renting and buying markets in the Hamptons would be like, how they would be affected. Early on, before the New Year, it looked as though the season might be as slow as the previous year. There were very few people renting anything, though there seemed to be plenty of activity on the sales end. But, according to many real estate agencies, after the New Year and especially following Presidents' Week, when Greenspan said it looked like the economy was coming to a slow rebound, the renting market picked up tremendous speed.

The question remained as to whether the market would be able to maintain that speed.

"Rentals were slow to start, but sales were strong all around. People were buying," says Judy Desidiero, manager of Cook Pony Farm Real Estate in Bridgehampton. "There are still many more sales than rentals though. Sales are much more prominent."

"Buying is at levels where [people] can afford to buy without having to rent the house to help carry the mortgage," Melissa Cohn tells me. Cohn is president and founder of Manhattan Mortgage Company. "People want to buy out there right now. It's becoming more of a buyers' market."

While sales have stayed strong, however, the renting market has dropped off rather dramatically again. Worse yet, some of the renters they have found are starting to second-guess themselves after seeing so many available homes still advertising in the papers. "$60,000/month homes for $30,000." People are looking for higher-end rentals at lower costs.

"The rental market has stalled again since [Presidents' Week]," says Tom Scounzo, at Overseas Connection in Sag Harbor. "People are bargain hunting. There is lots of negotiating. Everyone is trying to get more 'bang for their buck.' Houses that usually rent for $50,000 a month are going for $40,000 or $45,000 a month instead."

"There is much more negotiating going on," according to Stewart Epstein at Devlin McNiffs. Rentals are going at lower rates than planned.

Most real estate agents do not necessarily connect the new slowdown to 9/11 anymore, however. "There is no evidence of residue from 9/11 at this time," says Epstein. "People are not being fatalistic anymore."

But there has been a very clear change as to the overall state of the economy since Presidents Week, as evidenced in the big downturn of the stock market of late. Only last week it was hitting levels that have not been hit since the month following 9/11, dropping below the $10,000 mark. People are wondering whether the economy is really turning around.

A slumping economy leads to more of a buyers' market, so people who may usually be renting a home are actually looking to buy. While the renting market may have slowed, the buying market has not receded in the least.

"I still believe [the market] will be OK," says Scounzo. "The weather is getting warmer again and when it was warm the last time, was when [the market] surged. Warm weather always brings out the best in people. They want their summer houses."

"Sales are really strong," Epstein tells me. "Rentals are coming along. They have at least come along to 'not-a-bad' season levels. And they may still pick-up again."

"Since 9/11 it's been much busier," says Cohn. "People are committed to being out there. Traffic, dinner reservations, it's much busier all the time now."

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

There is a huge disconnect in our collective consciousness between the land and the production of food and other agricultural products. This is a sad commentary for a variety of reasons. Agriculture as an industry is the basis for our infrastructure in the United States whereby we all depend and look to our farmers for survival. Doctors, lawyers, business people, leaders, etc. are able to do what they do because farmers provide for our basic sustenance. Capital, weather, risk, technologies, transportation, processing and marketing, regulatory issues, food safety, disease prevention – all of these are present every time we reach for a container of milk or a box of cookies. When we lose a sense of this, we lose a sense of community and mutual dependency. We are supposed to learn from history. As an example, recent history should remind us that we are held hostage without a coherent energy policy and by one that places the supply security in the hands of rogue nations. Are we willing to do the same with our food supply?

Too often, agriculture and our farmers take a bum rap. Sometimes conventional wisdom has agriculture confused with greed and an agenda devoted to environmental degradation. The rhetoric contributes to degradation of our farmers spirit and sense of self worth. Modern farming is a true environmental success story. Farmers produce more with fewer pesticides, herbicides and other inputs on a razor thin margin. Yes, today's farmers are bigger than they used to be, but they must be efficient. Yes, we use crop protectants, but as little as possible. They are costly and heavily regulated. Here on Long Island and in New York State, we now use the A.E.M. program. (Agricultural Environmental Management) to help our industry use the best technology available and stewardship practices that exist today. Hippocrates, the father of medicine said, "Thy food is thy medicine, and thy medicine is thy food." Fairly prophetic from a couple of thousand years ago. Yes, meat, milk, wool and leather come from animal husbandry. If you don't agree with using these products, fine, but don't try to impose your value system on everyone else. There are certain realities of animal agriculture, but farmers and ranchers are not cruel and do not abuse their livestock. We, as citizens, agreeably use products from these animals.

The production of plants and animals for food constantly evolves. Modern farmers are conservationists and preservationists. They are true stewards of the land and water resources entrusted to them. They cannot simply pick up and move if the soils are exhausted. That is why farmers are not environmental activists but rather, active environmentalists. We will never satisfy the demands of radical groups who oppose us at every turn, but the next time you read or hear of these agendas, you might remember agriculture is your sustenance and security, a friend and caretaker of your vistas and you might even moderate your personal views.

A Little Pot Is All You Need

When you think of potting plants for your deck, patio or mounds under trees, what comes to mind first? Do you think of the colors, sizes or texture? There are so many planting combinations, that it would take three of Dan's Papers to really explain them all. But there are some basic "to-do's" that should be applied to get a professional look or that French bouquet style.

The color of the pots should certainly considered. If you are using soft pinks, grays and whites, a pale pot perhaps in a shade of gray would be perfect. Hot colors such as reds and oranges, mixed with some paler greens go well in terra-cotta. Whatever your choice, determine carefully the exposure they will get.

If you have a porch area that is semi-dark, you may want to stick with plantings such as white geraniums, or some Surfina white petunias mixed in with some Ipomoea "Margarita" to break up the dark areas. In the evening, when you have a light on, they pick up the lights glow.

Some winning combinations are a range of purple and lavender shades accented by clean white. A combo of Lantana "White Lightening" and Scaevola "New Wonder" plus Petunia Surfina "Blue Veined" and Strobilanthes Dyerianus is gorgeous!

A terra-cotta pot filled with different shades of Coleus, like "Tobasco" and "Rustic Orange," plus some fuchsia "Gartenmeister Bonstedt" make a great planting for under trees. Coleus likes shady to dappled sunlit areas.

For a pastel patio combination try a large pot filled with lavender and purple Heliotropeum "Fragrant Delight," lilac-pink Verbena Tenuisecta "Edith" and variegated Helichrysum petiorlare.

There is a simply outstanding plant, Strobilanthes or Persian Shield. Its 6-8 inch long, finely toothed leaves are dark bronze-green overlaid with a purplish pink and frosted silver. The effect of a mature plant is so impressive and it can grow 3 feet tall and just as wide. Paired up with a paler green trailing plant, such as a Plectranthus, it makes for one happy planting!

Orange zinnias planted with Ipomoea Margarita makes a lively contrast as well. The effect of the orange and lime green is a show stopper. I had this planted last year in a little wagon and it held up until Halloween. The colors were perfect for the fall as well.

When you are shopping for your plants at a respected nursery, take along swatches of your favorite color combinations. Your blues and pinks, purples and lavenders, your reds and yellows, and oranges and greens. Plan ahead and you will have the most curb appealing plants in your neighborhood.

The flats, large shelves at forty-five degree angles to the walls that run the length of one side of the room and are used to layout the paper got a thumbs up. This was good because we can't get rid of them.

The walls were next on the agenda and the off white, with the occasional ding and scrape here and there, would be improved upon with a striped wallpaper, perhaps a beige, wheat or gold. The ceiling, of course, should be painted in a bright white and the fluorescent lights should be replaced with natural lights. Shelves were a serious shortcoming and Schlichting recommended something more permanent and uniform that would utilize the space more efficiently.

The windows, always an important aspect of a room and one of the first things that she focuses on with new clients, currently have cheap Venetian blinds and should have a valence, something simple that would make them seem larger. Finally, the artwork, a couple of pieces of which were acceptable and appropriate for the room, should be re-hung at the correct height – namely, eye level. The suggestions that Schlichting provided would certainly make our room a place in which we could work more productively. As she said, "The goal is to enhance the client's image, to personalize their home, to expand their boundaries." Drawing from her background in Germany and England, she designs with that philosophy and acts as more of a catalyst for the client's taste than a purveyor of her own taste.

Working from the entrance of a home and then into the areas that get the most use, she shapes a space into a cohesive unit, employing texture and color combinations, and leaves a finished product that is more warm and welcoming. Using both antique and contemporary design, window treatments, soft furnishings and a variety of decorative accessories, she can help transform a space into something that is utterly the customer's.

Another aspect of the design process that Schlichting enjoys is helping clients choose art. As art is a fairly personal purchase she makes every effort to expose her clients to artists who she believes will fit their tastes. Her extensive contacts and knowledge of local artists can make this one of the most enjoyable aspects of the design process.

She demonstrated this in our office. Now, if we can only get Dan to approve the budget. –J.M.

Gabrielle Schlichting is based in Water Mill and designs both in the Hamptons and New York City. Contact her at 631-726-5621.

POLICE BLOTTER

Ladies and gentlemen, Eastport has made police news this week! "Where the heck is Eastport?" you ask. Just west of Remsenburg, of course. A family on Pleasant Valley Road called police after they discovered three 16-year-old boys smoking pot in a barn on their property. Officers arrived and charged them with trespassing and unlawful possession of marijuana and issued each an appearance ticket.

If you often read the Dan's Papers police blotter, you definitely read about various dumbbells on the East End doing dumb things. But rarely do you read about dumb people doing things with dumbbells (now's your chance). An East Hampton resident awoke last Sunday morning at about 4 a.m. after his grandson and a female acquaintance got into a scuffle resulting in a dumbbell being thrown through a window of the house. After throwing the weight, the girl left the house but returned before police arrived. Further investigation by police uncovered the girl hiding under a bush on the property. Police told her to repay the household for the damage she caused and not to return to the residence.

Another old dude hit a speed bump in life last week. This one, however, ended up in cuffs. A 61-year-old Southampton man went to his neighbor's front yard and took a newspaper that did not belong to him. The neighbor told police and the man was arrested and charged with petty larceny.

Some unknown burglar was horsing around last Wednesday in Quogue when he or she decided to steal a metal horse head from the front lawn of a Quantuck Bay Lane resident. The stallion bust, complete with metal nose ring, was busted from a five-foot wooden pole. Police have no leads.

Burn the bridge! Pillage the village! Loot the Tavern! Well, loot The Tavern, anyway. $12,810 worth of booze and beer was stolen from The Tavern on Tuckahoe Road in Southampton sometime between February 13 and April 24 of this year. Police investigating the incident told the club owner that, most likely, multiple individuals had stolen the beer, liquor and champagne over a span of a few days by tearing out an alarm control box to gain entry to the building before emptying the three walk-in refrigerators.

Youths were almost burnin' and lootin' in East Hampton last Saturday night. Police responded to an anonymous report of several youths jumping on the hood of a parked car. By the time cops got to the Waldbaum's parking lot, the kids had left.

It was probably one of those 10-10-220 commercials that drove someone to bend and tear a screen at a Woodbine Drive residence in East Hampton, only to enter the house and steal eight quarters. Yes, only eight quarters. But you must understand, a buck can go a long way these days, unfortunately not as far as the $30 needed to fix the screen.

* * *

They say bad things happen in 3's, maybe unusual items are stolen in 8's. A North Bay Lane resident called police last Friday when he discovered eight Andromeda bushes were removed from his lawn in East Hampton. The total value of the shrubbery is estimated at $480.

* * *

Sometime during a seven and a half hour span on the night of April 17 an unknown person broke into KeySpan and stole several computers and monitors, 10 two way radios, two cell phones and various office equipment, totally valued over $10,000. The thief entered through a rear window and left no trace for police to follow. There is such a thing as "tree karma," ya know.

A different thief took a different cell phone from a different location last Friday. A customer at the Stephen Talkhouse told police that he left his cell phone on the bar for a moment and lost track of it. The bar tender said he saw the phone but didn't see anyone take it. The cost of the stolen cancer creator is $400.

Dan's LETTERS

BEEN THERE, DONE THAT
Dear Dan,

A friend of mine sent me a clip from the Long Island section of The New York Times this week in which you said you did not return to New York City for ten years after leaving. "Sounds like you!" he wrote.

I left New York City twenty-four years ago and still haven't looked back. I commuted there for thirty-eight years and there's nothing left for me to see. Even the ladies of the night have day jobs.

And when last we spoke you asked if Alden Whitman had died. You may be interested to know that he died thirteen years ago. The interesting part is that is that he died in Paris while attending a birthday party (at seventy-six) for another neighbor of yours, Craig Claiborne. Those East Enders sure get around.

Have a great Long Island summer.

Jim Tuite

Where is Manhattan, anyway? –D.R.

A PEACEFUL MEMORY
Dear Dan,

On Saturday evening on April 20, I was gardening in Center Moriches near South Shore Bay. I had taken a few days off from the big city. It rained of and on all afternoon and as a dark day was coming to an end, I found myself weeding a rather large berm, near the house. Although a wet and muddy task, late on a wet day is far the greatest time for weeding. The rain stopped, the soil was deeply soaked and the weeds were coming up – roots and all, with little effort. I was completing a Herculean job.

All of a sudden the garden glowed bright... The light was coming from the creek behind me. I tuned to see sandwiched between the stormy skies and the dark water of the creek, a shoreline ablaze in the golden light. The sun was breaking through moments before setting and it lit this particular spot of reeds and trees, bathing them in brilliant glows of golden yellows. I was mesmerized. Far away, a dazzling white bird flew over. I followed the bird's flight as its wings battled the northern wind. That's when I saw the rainbow.

It was the biggest rainbow I could ever imagine. But I wasn't imagining it. The wide band of colors stretched from past Moriches inlet and in the ocean beyond, up to the dark heavens above and back down to the land in the north east... And yet the gold wasn't at the end of the rainbow. It was all beneath it. I realized that the northern end of the rainbow appeared to end near the Flight 800 memorial in East Moriches, or maybe at the nearby White Truffle Inn with it's distinguished widow's walk circling its roof. All I know is that I saw a message that all those that have been lost at sea are fine and beautiful, and they want us to know that.

It is moments like these when the heavens open up and speak to us.

Don D. Salkaln

PIZZA, A HOG AND A DOG... LIFE IS GOOD
Dear Dan,

My husband and I, Long Islanders since birth, often ride to the East End. We enjoyed many summers with our three daughters on the beaches and exploring the towns, as the girls were growing up. The last few years, most of our runs are made on our Harley. We are rediscovering the island. We enjoy biking east for the sights, antiques, farm produce, (we ride for roasted corn), and especially the eateries. For instance, one summer we spent the season in search of pancakes with blueberries cooked inside the pancake, as often blueberry goo is merely piled on top. Fresh blueberries add points. We make it up as we go along. I call us "Travels with Harley."

Several weeks ago, as I read the March 1, issue of Dan's Papers, I noticed the ad for your contest and we decided to initiate a pizza quest. Since Stormy, our queen-sized seventy pound pet, insisted on joining us, we left the bike home. I have to be honest; we ruined a perfectly good dog that sunny, Saturday afternoon in March. She now expects a piece of pizza whenever we park. Please take note that John and I were actually the discriminating voters of the trio, the drooling fool in the back seat liked them all. Please review my entry, printed below for the 1st Annual Pizza Essay Contest.

As an admirer of Dan's Papers for many years, I thank you for allowing me this opportunity to participate in your contest.

WATERFIELD
Financial Corporation

In 1928, Richard Waterfield thought nothing of getting in his car and driving 160 miles (each way) to hand deliver the paperwork to ensure a fast closing on a home loan. Making sure that a client could purchase a home quickly and easily was just his way of doing business. Today, this same philosophy separates Waterfield from other mortgage companies.

We believe, as many small businesses do, that each individual deserves our complete attention and commitment. Unlike other big lenders who make you wait through the days of red tape, our front line people can make quick decisions right in the field. Our dedication to customer satisfaction has enabled us to expand nationwide, despite the ever-changing real estate market. Because of our growth, we now have the resources of a large corporation. Waterfield is the largest privately-held mortgage company in the country with offices nationwide. This stability means that we will remain in the market to honor terms and service mortgage payment for years to come.

Since 1928, Waterfield has specialized in mortgage lending. Our team has the resources and expertise to provide for the best service possible, throughout each step of the process. Our high level of customer satisfaction from time of application through closing and into loan servicing has enabled us to become the oldest and largest privately-held mortgage banking firm in the United States.
